Dam Appeal Secret

The cabinet committee set up to hear appeals regarding the construction of the proposed Revelstoke Dam will hold its hearings in secret, Labor Minister Allan Williams said Tuesday.

Williams, chairman of the committee, told the legislature during question period that neither the news media nor unorganized groups will be able to attend the hearings.

The environment ministry announced last week that the committee had been appointed to hear the appeal of four organizations protesting the granting of a water rights licence to build the dam.

The announcement was confirmed by cabinet order on Monday, when the first closed meeting was held.

Bill King (NDP-Revelstoke-Slocan) told reporters he was shocked and appalled that the hearings are going to be held behind closed doors.

He said it is a dangerous precedent and "flies in the face of natural justice."

King told the legislature that such an appeal hearing could be held either through the B.C. Supreme Court or through cabinet committee, and that both are usually open to the public.

However, Williams said King is wrong, adding that legislation says a court appeal can only take place when a water rights cancellation is being appealed, not a water rights confirmation.

Small Surplus Predicted

By LIZ HUGHES

Times Staff

The provincial government is still predicting it will end with the fiscal year March 31 with a small budgetary surplus, the third quarterly financial report released Tuesday reveals.

The report, designed to be a sort of state-of-the-province message, was distributed with none of the fanfare which accompanied the first two quarterly reports.

The province has a budgetary surplus of $34.7 million for the first nine months of the fiscal year, from April to December, 1976, but says that surplus will be considerably reduced by the end of the fiscal year. The original budget had forecast a deficit of $25.5 million for the first nine months.

Many of the figures were contained in the B.C. comptroller-general's report released with the budget in January.

Predictions on the year-end state of the province's financial health have ranged through the first quarterly report which set out the possibility of a deficit through the second report which predicted either a break-even year or a "modest" surplus, to the third report which seems confident of at least a small surplus.

Both revenues and expenditures came in under the original budget forecast for the third quarter, revenues by $77.5 million and expenditures by $63.3 million.

The biggest saving in government expenditure came from the ministry of human resources which shows a budget of $63.3 million.

GOV'T COUNTS 8,117 NABOBS

OTTAWA (CP) — A total of 8,117 persons had total taxable incomes exceeding $100,000 during 1974, according to figures released in the Commons Tuesday.

Ontario leads in the high income sweepstakes, with 48 residents for every 100,000 reporting incomes of $100,000 or more.

Alberta follows with 35 residents out of every 100,000, followed by B.C. with 34 residents out of every 100,000 and Quebec with 31 per 100,000.

The Canadian average is 35 per 100,000 of the population.

A written response to a question by Liberal MP Harold Herbert (Montreal Vaudreuil) showed half of the wealthy 4,080, lived in Ontario. By comparison a total of 1,968 Quebec residents reported total incomes of more than $100,000.

Other provinces have fewer residents in the high-income range: British Columbia, 250; Alberta, 549; Saskatchewan, 200; Manitoba, 138; Nova Scotia, 113; New Brunswick and Newfoundland, 53 each. No figures were provided for Prince Edward Island and the two northern territories because of the small number of rich residents and the need to maintain secrecy about their tax returns.

Youth Dies In Smash

A 17-year-old youth was killed early this morning when the car in which he was riding struck a power pole in the 800-block Esquimalt Road.

Michael Wade Gurn, 18, Veron, was the eighth traffic fatality in Greater Victoria this year.

Esquimalt police have not yet released the name of a second person in the car. He suffered minor injuries and was treated and released from hospital.

The 1965 blue Chevrolet was westbound on Esquimalt just after 1:15 a.m. when it went out of control and struck the pole in front of the Cordon Blue restaurant at 820 Esquimalt.

Anyone who saw the vehicle prior to the accident is asked to call the Esquimalt police station.

TV Border War Truce Declared

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Canada appears to have abandoned a controversial broadcast policy and seeks a permanent truce in the so-called television border war.

This was strongly hinted by External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson at a previously-unpublicized meeting here last week with 24 American journalists.

Jamieson was asked about the suspension of Canada's policy to delete commercials from U.S. programs carried on midband and cable systems, a policy described by U.S. broadcasters as "piracy."

"I hope that what we have done already will be adequate," Jamieson said.

"So the suspension will continue?" he was asked.

"Yes," he replied.

"We don't want to be punitive just simply for its own sake," Jamieson said.

A U.S. official said the Americans would be "delighted" if the commercial deletion policy is abandoned, because up to now Canada has said only that it will suspend if pending discussion of alternatives. In fact there are no alternatives under discussion. The U.S. considers Canada has done enough damage by eliminating tax concessions to advertisers on border stations.

Cablevision companies in Canada were also pleased with the change in the policy which would have required all U.S. commercials to be blanketed out and replaced by public service announcements or Canadian commercials.

"This would have created a very complicated situation," Victoria cablevision general manager Len Charlish said.

"We would have been prepared to do it, if the policy had been implemented, but it is a relief to see it apparently will not go ahead."

The policy was implemented by Canada in Ontario and then immediately suspended when U.S. stations accused Canadian cablevision companies of "piracy."

Charish said the Ottawa decision would have no economic impact on the local cable TV station.

"We will continue to operate as we have in the past."

A similar policy invoked by Ottawa, of requiring cable stations to switch to a Canadian channel when the same program is running on a U.S. and Canadian station, will continue, however.

U.S. SUSPECTS GM CHEATED ON TAXES

NEW YORK (AP) — Federal officials suspect General Motors Corp. has purposefully understated its income and taxes over the last few years, possibly cheating the government out of hundreds of millions of dollars, according to the Wall Street Journal.

The Journal, in a story from Detroit, says investigators believe GM understated its income by writing off almost $300 million worth of parts and equipment that did not exist or had been written off before.

GM, the biggest auto-maker in the U.S. and one of the country's largest taxpayers, denies wrongdoing, and no official charges have been filed, the newspaper said.

There are no assurances charges will ever be filed. The Journal says, although the justice department and the Internal Revenue Service are pressing ahead with a major investigation of GM's finances.

The write-off practice is not illegal and is used routinely, the newspaper says, to cover old, obsolete and useless items.

"However, government officials believe that some of the items that were being written off had already been written off before or that some of the items may not exist."

He said the jewelry now is in possession of the RCMP. The Ropers said the antique jewelry had been given to them by his mother.

Roper complained that the RCMP had "blanketed" warrants.

"The warrant clearly states that they can break and enter any dwelling or business place and break open any box, cupboard or article of furniture merely on suspicion that anything undefined may be found on the premises."

"Their warrants have no expiry date and may be used against any person," Roper said.

CONVICT SWAP TREATY SIGNED

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canada and the United States announced today the signing of a prisoner-exchange treaty that also covers persons on probation or parole.

Under terms of the treaty — signed here by Canadian Solicitor-General Francis Fox and U.S. Attorney-General Griffin Bell — Canadians in U.S. prisons or on probation or parole from U.S. prisons may be transferred to Canada. U.S. nationals in Canada would have matching rights.

Fox said in a statement that the treaty, similar to an earlier Mexico-U.S. agreement, will serve as a prototype for Canada in negotiating similar arrangements with other countries.

The release said there are 242 Canadians in foreign prisons and 387 aliens in Canadian prisons. U.S. prisons hold 90 Canadians and 174 U.S. citizens are in Canadian prisons.

The statement added that before the treaty can be brought into force legislative changes must be approved by Parliament and provincial authorities will be consulted on the legislation.

The treaty provides that no individual will be transferred until all rights of appeal in the sentencing state have been exhausted. The transfer would be subject to the approval of each country and would not be initiated without the consent of the individual concerned.

Ferry Aid Near?

Agreement between the B.C. and federal governments on the province's request for a west coast ferry subsidy is at least one month away, Premier Bill Bennett predicted Tuesday. See story on page 10.

Air Fight Ends

OTTAWA (CP) — Supporters of two languages for Quebec pilots and air traffic controllers are close to winning their fight with the federal government, a spokesman for the Quebec air traffic controllers association said Tuesday. See story on Page 31.

The evening newspaper says Alex and Annette Roper wrote a letter to Campagnolo saying the RCMP used warrants to seize their jewelry from a safety deposit box and from their home.

Roper said in a telephone interview, "I told them the jewelry was our personal effects. They have said to me they think I smuggled it into the country."

"They even took the rings right off my wife's fingers. It's like a nightmare. I still can't believe this would happen in Canada, but it has."

Roper, 42, came to Canada from Yorkshire in 1966 with his wife and three children. A fourth child was born here.

He said his troubles began when he put an advertisement in a local paper to sell some of the jewelry to raise money to complete the basement of their home for two of the children.

He said the jewelry now is in possession of the RCMP. The Ropers said the antique jewelry had been given to them by his mother.

Roper complained that the RCMP had "blanketed" warrants.

"The warrant clearly states that they can break and enter any dwelling or business place and break open any box, cupboard or article of furniture merely on suspicion that anything undefined may be found on the premises."

"Their warrants have no expiry date and may be used against any person," Roper said.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Many children live in fear that someone will hurt them when they go outside to play, the U.S. Foundation for Child Development reported Tuesday. See story on page 3.

Clerks Parlay Consolation Into Million-Dollar Jackpot

VANCOUVER (CP) — Five Vancouver supermarket clerks parlayed a $250 Provincial lottery consolation prize into a $1 million jackpot Monday night.

The five, all employed by Canada Safeway Ltd., shared ticket number 4630415, one of the five ticket numbers worth $1 million, in the Provincial lottery draw, televised nationally from Winnipeg Monday night.

Lottery officials identified the five as David Heard, Leo Lepore, Tim Bullinger, Paul Spellman and Richard Unrau. "I didn't sleep a wink all night but I managed to make it work," Bullinger said in an interview Tuesday at the supermarket where he works.

Bullinger, a 21-year-old bachelor, said the clerks won $250 after buying 32 tickets on a previous draw. They decided to reinvest the prize in tickets for Monday's draw. They also chipped in periodically and were holding 71 tickets by draw time.

The clerks were the only major prize winners in B.C. who had checked in with lottery officials since Tuesday.

"All five of us got together to have a little party and watch the draw on TV," said Bullinger. "We figured we'd have a few close numbers, maybe pick up a couple of consolation prizes, but we were nowhere near on 70 tickets. We were getting a little down."

"But then along came the 1st ticket. Wow! It didn't matter — we hit the big one. Leo was the first to notice. He shouted, 'We won. We won.' It took the rest of us a couple of seconds to realize we was right, and then there was a lot of shouting and cheering going on."

The five, all in their 20s, will each take $200,000.

Bullinger said he will continue working at Safeway and hasn't made plans for his windfall.

Young lawyers training to be prosecutors are paid about $1,300 a month but the government recently began hiring outside lawyers at up to $6,000 a month to help clear a backlog of court cases.

"They made some fruitful points and the whole question of a solution is under review," Gardom told the house.

make such a recommendation. It could be considered deceptive "if, in fact, he did not specialize in medicine."

The bulletin, distributed to advertisers across the country to advise them of potential legal problems with their commercials, also warned about possible legal pitfalls in two routine advertising techniques: The use of so-called man-in-the-street interviews which speak glowingly of a product and product testimonials made by prominent individuals or experts.

In the interview format, the views expressed would have to be "a fair sampling of the opinions expressed by the persons approached."

If a well-known personality were to imply in a commercial that he used a product all the time, it could be considered misleading if he used it only occasionally or only once or twice, the bulletin said.

Anyone making an endorsement of a product should also disclose any financial connections with the firm that sells it, the bulletin said.

The fact the person was being paid to make the endorsement should also be stated if the commercial in any way implies he is doing it for professional reasons only or, for example, out of concern about deteriorating standards in an industry.

CANADA EYES NEW $ PEG

Times News Services
OTTAWA — It is possible the government may again file the Canadian dollar to the U.S. counterpart if the international value of Canadian currency drops substantially. Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said Tuesday.

But Macdonald told a Commons committee that present policy of the government is to allow the international marketplace to decide the value of the dollar through a floating exchange rate.

Since 1970, the dollar has floated freely on the international money markets. Between 1962 and 1970, it was pegged at 92.5 cents U.S.

Last November, the dollar was valued at $1.03 U.S. but at noon Tuesday it was 95.42 cents in New York. Today at noon it had risen slightly to 95.8. Some experts predict the dollar may fall below 90 cents later this year.

Meanwhile, the finance department reported today that the government sold off about $400 million if its U.S. currency holdings during February to smooth out irregularities in the downward decline of the Canadian dollar.

Holdings of U.S. currency dropped to $2,881 billion at the end of February from $3,284 billion at the end of January.

The decline indicates federal officials, seeking to stabilize the drop in value of the Canadian dollar, sold off U.S. funds and purchased surplus Canadian currency off international markets.

Rhodesia Rift

SALISBURY — Nine members of Prime Minister Ian Smith's Rhodesian Front Party walked out of a caucus meeting today in open rebellion. They are protesting plans for easing racial restrictions in the white-ruled nation.

One parliamentary leader, said he was "sore at heart" at the break but said the dissidents, including deputy minister Ted Sutori Fryce, would be asked to leave the caucus.

Only hours earlier, a Roman Catholic church spokesman, reported the murder of a Spanish priest in southeastern Rhodesian hills in a new flare-up of violence.

The body of 58-year-old priest, Father Jose Manuel Rubio Diaz, was found beaten to death near the Bangala Mission 50 miles south of Fort Victoria.

The spokesman, Father Eliezer of Gwelo Diocese, said he believed the killing was the work of black nationalist guerrillas.

Miners Lured

By B.C. Pay

LEEDS, England (Reuters) — Yorkshire miners are being tempted to emigrate by wage offers of $311 a week in a Sparwood coal mine — nearly triple what they earn at home.

Some skilled men from Kellingley, largest colliery in Yorkshire, have already left the pit to take up the offers, mine union official Jimmy Miller said today.

Miller was responding to a report by Bill King (NDP) —

The current dispute between the Government Employees Relations Bureau and 2,600 nurses doesn't warrant emergency debate in the legislature, Speaker Ed Smith ruled Tuesday.

Crowds Jeer Gandhi

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Tens of thousands of government workers booed and jeered Prime Minister Indira Gandhi at a campaign rally Tuesday only two weeks before national elections. Some walked out in the middle of her speech.

Indian observers said it was the first time a prime minister was treated with such irreverence at a rally.

Hours later, three times as many Indians turned out to cheer two of Mrs. Gandhi's chief political foes — former cabinet minister Jagjivan Ram and Mrs. Vijayalakshmi Pandit, the prime minister's aunt.

She conceded some mistakes "might have been committed" during the 15-month emergency rule she imposed June 26, 1975.

Government officials admitted that in carrying out the family planning program, some "overzealous" lower-level officials have sterilized some Indians against their will.

Officials of the ruling Congress party have admitted in private that Mrs. Gandhi's campaign is in trouble. Parliament was dissolved in January; the ruling party had 355 seats, more than a two-thirds majority.

They estimate the party may get only 260 to 280 of the 542 seats up for grabs in the mid-March elections.

The 44-year-old magnate built up his global shipping empire in just a decade after coming to Britain with only $136. The company now is valued at $255 million.

Two of his oil tankers, Globit Tokyo and Globit London, each over 238,000 tons, rank second and third in the Lloyd's Register of the world's largest ships.

He strongly defended the tactics used in ending the two-week occupation of the 34,618-ton Globit Venus by 28 Filipino crew members.

"What we did was purely legal, and the sort of means that should be used by any person or company to reposess his property," Tikkoo said.

Tikkoo, an ex-Indian naval officer, said his two giant tankers operating in the Far East were bringing Britain $42.5 million worth of foreign currency annually.

"Britain should be proud," said Tikkoo who last month ordered the world's first nuclear-powered oil tankers.

getary surplus of about $50 million for the first nine months of the year.

The ministry of finance shows a nine-month surplus of 30 million.

The government underestimates revenues from sales and personal income taxes and forestry revenues, the report says.

During the first nine months of the year, the government has had non-budgeted revenues totalling $79.7 million from such things as sale of two government ferries, recovery of special purpose funds and repayment of advances from the B.C. Harbors Board.

The investment by the government which produced that deficit was $26.8 million, only about $4 million, he said.

The government has held revenues within two per cent of forecasts and expenditures within four per cent, not a bad showing, he said.

Tony Leader Scott Wallace said his worst fears have been justified by the $50 million surplus in the ministry of human resources.

Wallace said half of that comes from money which should have been passed along to the handicapped, "the people in society least able to defend themselves."

He repeated earlier statements that sales tax increases imposed by the Social Credit government have cut con-

Canada's Prison Mess

Testimony before the parliamentary subcommittee examining Canadian penitentiaries confirmed the institutions of many people. Our prisons are outdated, outmoded and in some cases, filled with corruption. They are the final destination for lawbreakers in a land where judges say there are too many anachronistic laws. While our prisons moulder, recommendations of the national law reform commission grew rancid. Lethargy and lack of money in the Canadian legal system has left us with a shameful legacy and another inquiry into another aspect of the same dreadful situation.

Guards contended they needed greater control over prisoners. In Vancouver, former guards even suggested a return to the paddle — physically hurting people seems to be a popular panacea among criminals and the law-abiding middle classes these days. Yet the committee also confirmed the existence of a "goon squad", among custodial officers at Ontario's Millhaven prison. Not only did this group of guards harass inmates, it intimidated other members of the prison staff and kept the administration cowed by threatening strike action. It was even alleged that guards fomented trouble among inmates to increase overtime pay. Both the Ontario regional director for the Canadian Penitentiary Service and Millhaven's director confirmed prisoner testimony about the existence of the goon squad. Perhaps the Millhaven experience is an isolated example, but how many other guard groups or individuals did not come to light before the committee? The prisoners have to go back to the cell block, the committee goes home to Ottawa.

Even more disturbing, how could two high officials of Ontario's prison system know and condone the existence of such a squad operating in the prison? Then we read of 400 prisoners from Laval prison in Quebec sent to a correctional institute north of Montreal after a disturbance. They were kept in their cells for 22½ hours per day. Any complaints and they were put in solitary confinement. As the Globe and Mail wrote: "After months of such caging was anything rational expected to come out of these cells?"

The solicitor-general's department has revealed that only 35 of 1,229 guards in the Canadian penitentiary service had gone beyond high school. Among the 35 only six had university degrees. At Archambault, a maximum security prison north of Montreal, none of the 169 guards had gone beyond high school, and 99 had not reached Grade 10. Higher education does not guarantee humanity, but it is a good prerequisite for the sophistication necessary to deal with prisoners. Guards at Millhaven receive a basic annual salary of $13,000 — not much by contemporary standards, especially in a difficult job — but at least one guard earned $30,000 last year by working nearly 1,500 hours of overtime.

The first task of the parliamentary committee is to immediately clean out those guards who are abusing the system through intimidation and harassment. That done the committee must find out if any standards exist for guard qualifications. If standards do exist they should be upgraded and provided with decent pay rates to ensure abuses aren't continued. There should also be closer scrutiny of the prison system by independent arbiters not connected with the government or its agencies, and with complete access to every corner of the flocks which so often pass for prisons in this country.

It is time for some action in this neglected sphere of Canadian life. The place to start is with law reform itself, working through the system and improving incarceration facilities, providing real rehabilitation, or in some cases, community work. Hardliners have had their day, resulting in prison riots and even killings. It is time for a more enlightened approach.

Times Trash

I still can't believe my eyes when I read, for the umpteenth time, the editorial page of February 15.

The two articles of your own re Premier Bennett are so loaded with sarcasm, bitterness, disrespect that you should have your mouth washed out with soap!

To top it off, you actually printed H. E. Sadler's letter entitled "Freedom — Loving". Is he for real? Because if he is, the police should keep a sharp eye on him! You remember him? He wanted to "shoot the odd copper or rape the occasional woman". He also doesn't mind "slicing up a few pedestrians" since, according to him "there are too many people in the world anyway."

We have been subscribers to your newspaper for nearly six years but because of the untruths you "report" re S.C. leaders, and editors letters like Sadler's, we might as well be taking the Enquirer. It's trash too!

You have freedom of the press but with that freedom comes the responsibility of factual, truthful reporting. If you can't handle it, you'd be better off driving a garbage truck, and so would your readers.

The premier gave a speech at a $15.50 each, fund-raising dinner Wednesday night at the Empress. There's not one line in your paper about it. Why not? Afraid to print truth?

You certainly seem to feel free to print half-truths and untruths but not truths. When the premier speaks, and that speech is televised and notes taken by reporters, it seems irresponsible and disrespectful not to enlighten the public. You must think you're God or, at least, His right hand man. Such false pride on your part! — J.D. Sidney.

Clark's Inertia

I have yet to hear the leader of the Progressive Conservatives speak of any concrete steps his party would take if they were returned to power at the next election. He always speaks in generalities but there is, in fact, no difference in basics between the Liberals and the Conservatives I suppose we must accept that fact and not expect any concrete basic changes in policies. Mr. Clark did say, in a weak moment, that his party would dismantle the national oil company Petrocan which would surely be a very retrograde step if we wish to maintain even a semblance of economic independence. Not a word about taxation except to grant more concessions to the big corporations in the form of industry incentives which have not produced results in the past and are, in fact, being practised by the present Liberal government in the form of tax concessions for exploration for oil. He speaks vaguely of changes to the BNA Act but he may find this harder than he thinks when revision is considered seriously. We have had little luck in the past. Not a word about reform or abolition of the non-elected Senate which is a resting place for Liberal and Tory political blocks at public expense and very often these good Liberals and Conservatives are rejects after defeat at the polls. No basic steps to tackle the unemployment problem which has reached extremely dangerous levels.

The country must return effective control of the treasury and currency directly to parliament. It must also recover the nation's wealth and assets from the vaults and overseas hideaways of the chartered banks and their cabal of collaborators. An accounting, and responsible liability since 1946 is a mandatory condition. Recovery can be by way of confiscation, nationalization or an imposed 51 per cent interest on behalf of the people. When this is done, Canada can pay off foreign ownership by way of cash, or term debentures. The prime benefit will be the achievement of debt-free stability, a solvent basis upon which to re-establish free trade, and an equitable system of ensuring fair foreign exchange. A universal high standard of living for all Canadians is assured.

In addition, a return to the maxim of "one man, one job," backed up, if necessary, by a penalizing rate of personal income tax, will enable the population to put itself to constructive use, and regain pride of workmanship. A further reform is the setting up of government, crown agencies, and industry in such a manner that conflict of interest, concomitant and concurrent positions are not permitted, no matter how how it is.

Only when these fundamental factors are recognized, and accepted, and insisted upon by the electorate, and practised by elected and appointed officials in every level of directive service, will Canada be able to overcome the apathy, guile, suspicions, divisiveness, and fragmentations that are contemporary and commonplace, tearing the life and wealth out of the nation.

Leadership has to epitomize these ideals, and cast off the image of self-interest that oozes from every pore. — F. Fred Kirkman, 521 Normandy Road.

Had we been aware in 1972 that the Academy lands (northern section) would not be used for the purpose designated, the Sisters of Saint Ann would have retained the entire parcel for sale at a later date — when conditions were more favorable.

The primary concern of the Sisters of Saint Ann was the continuation of hospital service to the people of Victoria from a downtown location.

In the present debate about the location of Victoria's second general hospital, we regret that little consideration has been given to the expressed reason for the sale and purchase of the Academy property five years ago.

We are disappointed that there is question now of discontinuing general health care at and from the historic site of St. Joseph's. — Sister Eileen Kelly, Sisters of Saint Ann, 1550 Begbie Street.

Contempt

We seem to have come a long way from Mr. Trudeau's "just society." Justice, it seems, would be served by people with differing views taking full advantage of the democratic process.

Such a formula was adopted to satisfy the fears expressed by the professional aviation community for aviation safety if a second language were arbitrarily introduced in certain high traffic conditions in Quebec. The government appointed a commission of inquiry and mounted an expensive simulation exercise to examine any dangers and refine procedures. But while the case is before the tribunal the prime minister and several of his ministers have already stated the verdict. They hold all the cards.

This inquiry costs my association $3,000 per week and at the present rate of progress we estimate that the inquiry may run at least 20 weeks. When our money runs out we will face highly technical courtroom procedures without legal counsel. The government obviously won't run out of public money.

It is an insult to the commissioners, an injustice to many parties who were promised a fair hearing of their differences, and a subversion of public morality for the prime minister to encourage rather than forbid such tampering with the inquiry process.

If this were a criminal proceeding, Mr. Trudeau would be liable to a formal charge of contempt of court. It remains to be seen whether he can withstand the charge of contempt of the electorate. — J. M. Livingston, President, Canadian Air Traffic Control Association, Ottawa.

Disappointed

Though the Sisters of Saint Ann officially withdrew from the ownership and operation of St. Joseph's Hospital (now the Victoria General Hospital) on February 16, 1972, we are vitally interested in the continuation of this hospital as an acute care facility in the downtown area of the city. We heartily endorse the efforts of Dr. Peter Banks and other members of the medical staff to maintain, enlarge and modernize the present structure.

When the Sisters of Saint Ann gifted the hospital — its land and buildings — to the people of Victoria through the Southern Vancouver Island Hospital Society, they agreed to make available for sale to the government the northern portion of the grounds of St. Ann's Academy.

This decision was reached because the sisters felt that it was in the public interest to provide land for the necessary expansion of the existing hospital. Indeed, the health minister at that time (Honorable Ralph Lofmark) wrote that it was his view "that the total consideration being paid is less than the market value and the transfers are in the public interest."

We are still of the mind that it is the public interest to maintain the hospital in its present location, utilizing the adjacent lands for necessary expansion.

TV Violence: What to Do?

TORONTO — The Judy LaMarsh commission on violence in the communications industry, set up by the Ontario government two years ago, will soon be issuing its final report. In an apparent effort to soften the blow, it has released two research papers which strongly suggest that provincial government regulation of television programming is necessary to solve the "violence problem."

From a research point of view, the two studies have little new to say. Both are really summaries of psychological experiments and field work which have long been known. Prof. Richard Goranson of York University presents in his paper the rather overwhelming evidence that television programming is necessary to solve the "violence problem."

Prof. Philippe Rushton of the University of Toronto gives in his study the less conclusive evidence (much less research has been done) that pro-social programming has positive effects on real life behaviour.

People Hurt by It

Clearly, however, these reports are intended, at least by the LaMarsh commission, as political rather than scientific documents. Scientifically, the television programmers will never be convinced that violence is bad for people, any more than the tobacco industry will admit that smoking can cause cancer. But the public and the government can perhaps be convinced that common sense demands more radical control of programming than now exists.

The whole thrust of these reports is to common sense, summed up by Goranson in his final paragraph:

"Concerned citizens must recognize that the elimination of brutality and violence from television and other media will not eliminate the major proportion of violent crimes either in the short run or in the long run. On the other hand, the people responsible for producing the high level of violence that is routinely shown in the media, and those people who are unwilling to regulate it, must recognize the likelihood that real people are being hurt everyday because of it."

Regulation, of course, can come in two forms — self-regulation in the industry, or control by government. Goranson patently doesn't expect much from the commercial television industry if only because it has consistently tried to sidestep the issue by confusing horror with violence.

Horror is rarely seen in television shows (the movie reruns are, of course, a big exception) because, to quote a 1968 issue of Broadcasting magazine: "Anything that shows too much agony, too much punishment, or is too bloody, anything that could be too startling . . . is being taken out or reduced wherever possible."

... violence breeds violence?

Government regulation of programming content inevitably will bring protests of "censorship," "thought control," etc. but here Rushton makes or rather supports, an interesting proposal.

He argues that once television is recognized for what it is — namely an agency for socialization, shaping and effecting the behavior of those who watch it — then the issue of power and control cannot be avoided. One possibility would therefore be to place the same kind of public control over the television system as that which now exists over the educational system.

Regulation, of course, can come in two forms — self-regulation in the industry, or control by government. Goranson patently argues that the educational system is controlled in part by both elected local boards, and by elected municipal and provincial government agencies," Rushton writes.

"Ultimately it is the government that is responsible for the curricula of the schools. This line of reasoning leads in the end to there being as much government control over television as there is over education.

"While such a method of exerting control might be considered rather extreme in the present context, there is no doubt that some additional control is needed. Essentially we should be increasing the amount of pro-social content (in television programming), and decreasing the amount of anti-social content."

One suspects this is the approach the LaMarsh commission will be taking in its final report. The Ontario government, for its part, is likely to be sympathetic because it would be quite consistent with provincial demands, by many provinces, that the federal government surrender jurisdiction over cable television, at least to the provinces.

Problem of Censorship

Whether it would really dent the problem of violence on television, however, is another matter. Considering the amount of television programming imported from the U.S. or available through U.S. border stations, the result might simply be great blanks in the Canadian broadcasting schedules.

There is also the real problem of censorship, and here the research on the effects of violence leave something to be desired. The available evidence shows clearly enough that depicted violence tends to be imitated because violence works. The idea that violence is an acceptable means for achieving goals is inherent in virtually all television programs that exploit violence.

It may well be, however, that violence which is not rewarded is not imitated, or at least much less imitated. If so, one would have ground for censoring out S.W.A.T., for example, while passing Shakespeare's Macbeth. But one cannot say for sure, because apparently little or no research has been done on violence which does not pay.

Leadership has to epitomize these ideals, and cast off the image of self-interest that oozes from every pore. — F. Fred Kirkman, 521 Normandy Road.

The Doctor Must Become a 'Priest' Again

By CHRISTINE DOYLE
London Observer

The revolution in "civilized" concepts of health goes on.

In the last few years Western health officials have been forced to look at the ancient practice of acupuncture as something more than just some form of Oriental hocus-pocus.

Now it appears that witch doctors and medicine men are being recognized as playing a useful role in the mental and physical health of people in developing nations.

To this end, the World Health Organization is launching an extended campaign to focus attention on the psychological as opposed to purely physical aspects of health.

Representatives of more than a dozen nations, meeting in Stockholm, have drawn up a blueprint aimed at countering the "psychic and cultural pollution" caused by the dominating influence of medical technology.

"We have a crisis in trust. Our medical systems are not very well adapted to the healthy, let alone the needs of the ill," said Dr. Lennart Levi, director of a stress research laboratory in Stockholm, the first WHO centre dealing exclusively with the psycho-social aspects of health.

Delegates described many instances both of cultural warping caused by the intrusion of Western standards and of medical knowledge and technology defeating its own ends through ignoring human reactions. They include the following and, not surprisingly, some are all too familiar to the so-called developed world:

— There is evidence that medical technology in the shape of resuscitators and other mechanical paraphernalia may actually hinder recovery through imposing mental stress. One delegate said the survival rate of heart disease patients treated in hospitals compared with those treated at home was not always very different. Sometimes the rate was lower in hospitals, even though the basic drug treatment might be the same.

— A decrease in breast feeding — encouraged by glossy advertising of artificial baby foods — has run counter to tradition with disastrous results. Impoverished mothers in the third world may dilute feeds excessively, thus undernourishing their children, as well as denying them the advantage of immunity to infection passed on through breast milk. Just as important, and much less well acknowledged, was the fact that continuing lactation is a natural contraceptive — albeit not 100 per cent effective — allowing children to be better spaced out and more adequately cared for.

— Many of the conference were concerned with the break-up of family life in developing countries as people moved from rural to urban homes, youngsters were alienated, attracted by what was projected as a more alluring and "better" way of life, and the elderly isolated. Along with the break-up of families was the loss of personal relationships with doctors.

"Family doctors must get back to being the old type of family doctor — the priest — who knows each family on a personal basis," said Dr. Meropi Viotaki, director-general of hygiene in Greece. (Even in Sweden, noted for its primary care services, there is concern. General practitioners rarely visit patients in their homes, and there is grassroots pressure for reversal of this trend.)

have acquired the Western habit of garranching their doctors in mystique, so much so that patients were failing to take any responsibility for their own health through self-care.

Dr. Lennart offered a popular summup analogy. "At present, medical care is in many instances rather like an ambulance waiting at the bottom of the cliff for the patient to fall over. Then we treat him. But little is being done to prevent him falling over the cliff."

One of the conference recommendations is that successful programs should be analyzed and knowledge of them passed on to other countries.

For instance, a program to rid certain areas of bilharzia, a parasitic disease passed on by snails and very prevalent in unsanitary conditions, had met with little success until the elderly village chief was drawn into it, then it was found that message by word of mouth from the elders to the children particularly had achieved far more than a wealth of conventional films, compelling leaflets and trained outside health workers.

Dr. Zuhair Ali Nur, director of curative medicine in Sudan, explained that many of the nomads in his country might "care more for their camels than for their children." Camels might be the last link with survival: children could be replaced. Permanent health stations scattered around the desert had little to break through this fatalistic philosophy.

"Now we are going to meet them on their terms with some sort of wandering health worker who is actually chosen by their own chiefs."

The Price Of Freedom

CANADIAN JEWISH NEWS
An Editorial

Cultural assimilation is one of the inevitable prices American Jewry has paid for the freedom, affluence and influence it so bountifully enjoys. In a nation where merit and ambition usually count for more than class and religion, Jews have done remarkably well. From the first days of Jewish settlement in the United States, inter-marriages and mixed marriages have taken their toll, and one social scientist has even estimated that about 20 per cent of the total population have at least one lone Jew in their family tree.

Whatever the accuracy of that figure, the implications of it are rather obvious. Just as anti-Semitism threatened European Jews in the thirties, so acculturation threatens American Jewry today.

Nothing illustrates this state of affairs better than the cabinet choices made by President Jimmy Carter. One man, a Jew, is married to a Protestant. Two are converts to Christianity and a third is a Christian whose mother was Jewish.

Harold Brown, the secretary of defence, was the first Jewish Secretary of the Air Force, and prior to being appointed to his latest position, he served as president of the prestigious California Institute of Technology. Secretary of the Treasury Werner Michael Blumenthal was baptized at birth and has no connections with the Jewish community. James Schlesinger, the former secretary of defence and CIA boss, who was appointed energy adviser, celebrated his bar mitzvah but converted to Lutheranism at the age of 21. The parents of Theodore Chaikin Sorenson, who nearly became CIA chief, were of Danish and Jewish origin.

Conclusion? As long as America remains committed to democratic ideals, and as long as Jews are willing to partake in its culturally rich and invigorating society, this problem will remain in the forefront of Jewish concern. It is something the Jewish community will have to realistically face.

Sun Affects Odd Weather

By THOMAS O'TOOLE

DENVER — The cold weather east of the Rockies and the drought to the west may have been triggered at least in part by a prolonged lack of activity on the surface of the sun.

"It's hard for me to believe that the sun cares about what the weather is like in Boston and Buffalo," Dr. John A. Eddy of the Harvard University-Smithsonian Observatory Center for Astro Physics said in an interview here. "But the fact is we should have been into a rise of solar activity in the autumn of 1975 and here we are a year and a half overdue into getting that rise."

Eddy told the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science that he did not believe the sun was the main culprit in this winter's weather, but that he did believe it could be counted among the suspects to blame for the western drought and the eastern ice.

The sun reached the high point of its 11-year sunspot cycle in 1969, then began a decline in sunspots that should have reached a minimum activity extended for a year and a half, only beginning in the last month to show signs of reversing itself.

Sunspots are believed to be disturbances in the sun's magnetic field caused by sudden surges in temperature and a speeding up of the sun's rotation. Scientists long have believed sunspots may disrupt radio communications on Earth. Now, scientists suggest sunspots might influence the weather as well.

"Whenever the sun loses its spots over a long period of time, the Earth has gone into a very cold spell," Eddy said. "When sunspot activity is as low as it's been the last two years there is a change in the solar wind that could result in a change of the circulation patterns of the Earth's upper air.

"I don't know why but we don't understand it," Eddy said, "but I guess it's like asking the fish at the bottom of the sea to know if it's raining on the top."

Scientists still believe the main culprits in any changes in the weather are the dust, pollution, carbon dioxide and sulfur dioxide that climb into the upper atmosphere from the surface of the Earth, causing temperature and wind changes.

Dust has been blown all over the globe the last two years by winds carrying sand out of the Sahara desert. Aerosols — small particles — from industrial pollution are at a record high and more and more carbon and sulfur dioxide is reaching the upper atmosphere as more and more coal, oil and natural gas are being burned by the industrial civilizations of the Earth.

"This is why you get worldwide weather shifts — the amounts of dust and pollution that can cut off the sun's light and heat from certain parts of the Earth," Eddy said. In spite of all the Earth's surface activity, Eddy said there is growing evidence that the sunspot cycle can at least be tied to the drought that has now plagued 11 Western states for the last year. He said that work done by scientists at the University of Arizona on tree rings suggests that drought strikes the West every 22 years, at the end of every other 11-year sunspot cycle.

It is more difficult to tie solar activity with the bitter cold and snowfalls suffered by states east of the Rockies this year, but the same upper air masses that are carrying precipitation away from the West are dumping it on the East.

"The West is experiencing drought," Eddy said, "and the East its now usual amount of snow plus whatever snow the West would have had in a normal year."

Difficult as it is to link brief lapses in sunspot activity to this year's cold winter, Eddy said long periods of low solar activity in the past can be correlated to long periods of cold temperatures on Earth. The study of tree rings around the globe have shown a direct tie between the two, he says.

The period matching the reign of France's King Louis XIV from 1643 to 1715 was a period of high radioactive carbon-14 levels in the Earth's tree rings. Eddy, who also checked historical records, said the most severe temperature drops on Earth in the last 1,000 years occurred during that period.

Crops failed throughout the British Isles, the Norse colony in southwest Greenland perished from the cold and the Spanish Conquistadors wrote that they rode their horses into Mexico across a frozen Rio Grande.

Scandinavians reported that there were no displays during that period of the aurora borealis, which is produced by showers of solar particles striking the Earth's magnetic fields. British astronomer Edmund Halley was 60 years old when he saw his first northern lights in 1715, the year the "little ice age" ended.

Eddy said it is impossible to say if next year's winter will be a repeat of this year's, because there are too many variations in the Earth's climate. And there are signs now that the sun is about to resume an upward climb in its sunspot cycle.

Time to Remember . . .

The Otto Awards are given today for the first time since 1966. They are named in memory of Dr. Otto von Auerbel, the Nazi absent-minded professor, who, after discovering in 1935 how to make the atomic bomb, forgot to mention it to Hitler. In his spirit, the Otto is awarded to persons who have served humanity by failing to do something that would have made the world a worse place. No awards have been made in the past 10 years because, during that period, nobody anywhere neglected the slightest opportunity to do his or her worst. This year's prize winners are:

Hugo Newfield, of South Mercer, N.D. Jaded by the normal sexual excesses which had become commonplace with the full flowering of the sexual revolution, Newfield labored two years in his remote prairie laboratory to invent a new sexual excess. His invention required parties indulging in the new excess to acquire special equipment which included 10 pounds of salt-water taffy and a large electrical generator. When Newfield proposed to test his invention on his lab assistant, Igor, the old gentleman fled in terror, cackling that Newfield was insane. This so depressed Newfield that he planted dynamite in his laboratory and blew it up.

Omar Tweed, of Custer's Ford, Mo. For 45 years a neighborhood druggist, Tweed had become outraged at the rise of the giant drugstore chains and the resulting decline in neighborhood drugstore sales. He decided that the consciousness of all Americans had to be raised if the neighborhood drugstore was to be treated again with dignity. Accordingly, he planned to lead a terrorist group, made up of desperate neighborhood druggists, who would commit hijacking, bombings and kidnappings to draw public attention to their plight. Tweed abandoned his scheme after Mrs. Tweed pointed out that he was too rheumatic to fire a machine gun from a squatting position.

Elsie Staines, of Bayonne, N.J. Miss Staines was being courted by Merle Crozier, a brilliant young computer designer, who told her that without her at his side for the rest of his life, he would never be able to create a computer that would enable mankind, at the touch of a button, to recover and look at every television show ever made. Miss Staines rejected his marriage proposal.

Argus Melhaden, of Washington, D.C. A notorious gigolo in Washington social circles, Melhaden was approached by a literary agent with a multimillion-dollar contract for a full-length account of what Congressmen's wives really did in the afternoon while Congressmen were at the office. Melhaden had almost completed the book when he realized that if it was published, he would have to appear on TV talk shows all over the country to promote its sale. Having suffered agonies of stage fright since his third-grade class play, in which he had starred as Casanova and been mercilessly panned by the critics, Melhaden burned the manuscript.

Mitzi Beeswicks, of Wen, Del. Mrs. Beeswicks is a music teacher in the Wen elementary school system. After her third year on the job, she went into a deep depression at the discovery that almost none of her pupils were able to appreciate Scarlatti, or even Beethoven. Her first impulse was to write an angry book that would arouse the nation to the deprivation of its children. She got only as far as the title — "Why Johnny Can't Hear Haydn" — when she concluded that writing a book would be useless, since Johnny couldn't read either, and submitted instead to psychiatric therapy.

Hans Adams and Carl Jagers, of the Bronx, N.Y. This joint award to two young street muggers stems from their response to an incident in midtown Manhattan last spring. After mugging a distinguished gentleman, they discovered in their loot a mystifying set of papers. After close study, they realized that these were the only blueprints in existence for a massive construction project that would make San Francisco look exactly like Third Avenue. "We should give it back," said Jagers. Instead, without further hesitation, they tossed it into the Harlem River.

Gunther Royalton, of Lapwing, Tenn. The janitor in a giant fake-food laboratory, Royalton watched for years while scientists toiled to develop the instant lamb chop. When they had perfected it — a secret formula of minced styrene, elm ashes and finely ground garters — everyone went home and forgot to lock it up. Spying it, Royalton started to put in the safe, then changed his mind and tasted it. Immediately, he poured the powder down the sink and ate the secret formula.

The Law as Dirty Joke

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

What do we do about them? If Ottawa has given any thought to the matter, no hint of it has managed to penetrate the mist.

Ottawa, for its very minor part in the drama, nods now and then in the direction of its ancient promise to reduce penalties for cannabis offences by transferring the drug from the jurisdiction of the Narcotic Control Act to that of the Food and Drug Act.

That promise has become something of a dirty joke. But even if Ottawa were to surprise everyone by picking up its promise up, blowing the dust away and putting it into action — in fact, even if Ottawa were to go hog-wild and legalize possession of marijuana — there would still be that other, even bigger problem. We'd still have thousand upon thousand of marijuana profiteers not yet out of their teens. And they'd still be criminals.

Should Ottawa take the breath out of the black market by legalizing the whole business and then imposing its own administrative controls?

A heady prospect, and an intimidating one.

But these are the sort of things Ottawa should be contemplating — and commenting upon from time to time. They are certainly the sort of things that the public would appreciate being informed about.

U.S. Enforces 200-Mile Limit

United Press International
U.S. Coast Guard teams boarded three Soviet trawlers off the East Coast Tuesday and said they found no violations of a new U.S. law extending the nation's offshore fishing grounds by 2 million square miles.

But the impact of the law that took effect at midnight Monday spread to the Far East, where the Soviets, imposing their own limit, ordered eight Japanese fishing vessels to leave waters of Soviet Siberia.

There were these other developments related to the United States' move to protect its fishing industry from highly mechanized foreign competition by extending the old 12-mile limit to 200 miles offshore:

The State Department said Cuba and the United States will be brought together for their first official contact in three years to negotiate a fishing accord adjusting the new limits.

The House approved agreements allowing vessels from Japan, South Korea, Spain and western Europe's nine Common Market countries to resume limited fishing within the 200-mile zone after being urged to help "our friends and allies."

Canadian ships fished without licenses pending resolution of a dispute with the United States over who owns a patch of the Atlantic Ocean off Cape Sable, Nova Scotia.

The Coast Guard cutter Dallas boarded two Soviet vessels as it patrolled the Atlantic 85 miles south of Martha's Vineyard and crewmen from the cutter Sherman boarded a third Soviet boat off the Massachusetts coast.

The Russian ships' catches were found to be legal — consisting almost entirely of hake, a cod-like fish declared "surplus" under the law and available to foreigners holding permits to fish U.S. waters.

Under the licensing provisions for foreign ships, they must pay duties amounting to one dollar for each gross ton of vessel weight and 3.5 cent of the market value of its catch.

Pay Hike Around White House

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. federal pay raise, which went into effect Tuesday, will push salaries up among staff members of the White House and on Capitol Hill.

Up to 14 members of President Carter's staff, by law, will be entitled to $37,500 a year, the same salary that senators and House members will receive now.

For the three top elected officers of the House — the clerk, the sergeant at arms and the doorkeeper — the new raise will put them at $32,500. Coming on top of another little-noticed pay increase voted for these three House officers last month, their salaries would be $12,900 above what they were receiving less than six months ago.

Also eligible by law to receive $32,500 a year are 11 House legislative aides and 5 employees of the legislative counsel's office.

N-Hearing Bans Press

SEATTLE (AP) — A fight over nuclear power plant construction turned into a battle over press rights Tuesday at a public hearing of the nuclear regulatory commission's atomic safety and licensing board.

Board Chairman Samuel Jensel refused to convene the hearing over proposed Skagit River and Pebble Springs, Ore., nuclear plants until all cameras were cleared from the room. He finally got his way, but not until a television news assignment editor made a statement to the press.

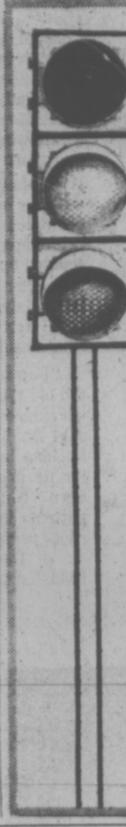

When television and newspaper photographers refused to leave, Jensel called for federal marshals to evict them.

An agreement finally was reached and a hearing started 15 minutes late, with Jensel commenting, "I think it's a violation by the press to do what they want regardless of the rules."

Jensel said he wanted the cameras removed because the commission is an independent federal agency with the right to set its own hearing rules. He said the ban on photography during hearings has been in effect since the commission was formed.

"We feel we have a right to be here," said Cogan. After first refusing to let Cogan make a statement, Jensel finally allowed the statement in return for having the cameras removed.

New Round of Terrorism Predicted Across U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States will experience a slight increase in terrorism and a new round of violent political protests similar to the urban and campus riots of the 1960s, a government advisory group predicts.

The Task Force on Disorders and Terrorism urged government officials at all levels to prepare detailed plans for dealing with such emergencies. It did not predict when they would occur.

The plans should allow temporary city-wide curfews, temporary suspension of some legal activities, court injunctions blocking potentially violent demonstrations, and the use of military forces as a last resort to restore order, the study group said in a 60-page report.

The group of police officials and law-enforcement special ists carried out the study with $20,000 from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration but said the findings do not necessarily represent views of the federal agency.

Group chairman Jerry Wilson, District of Columbia police chief from 1969 to 1974, is affiliated with American University. In 1975, a federal judge awarded $12 million in damages to 1,200 demonstrators arrested by Wilson's police during protests in 1971. The award is under appeal.

A second judge also found that Washington police violated civil rights and used unnecessary force during every major anti-war demonstration in the capital from 1969 to 1975.

Though the urban riots faded in the 1960s and anti-war protests melted away as U.S. involvement in the Indochina war ended, the government has done little to correct the underlying causes of the disorders, the study group said.

Today's general orderliness is a "false claim, and we must see in the current social situation an accumulation of trouble for the future."

"Many of the traditional indicators for disorders are clearly present and need but little stimulus to 'activate' them," it said.

Ferry Subsidy Seen by Bennett

Agreement between B.C. and the federal government on the province's request for a west coast ferry subsidy is still at least one month away, Premier Bill Bennett said Tuesday.

He made the announcement at a joint news conference with federal Transport Minister Otto Lang following meetings earlier Tuesday between transport officials of both governments.

Bennett said both sides had made modified proposals, but refused to be specific, other than stating that he's "very optimistic" from the discussions we've had."

Lang said making a prediction on when agreement would be reached is risky, but said he would be taking solid recommendations to the federal cabinet in the course of the next 10 days.

Bennett said the negotiations are at a very delicate stage currently and that bargaining is far from finished.

B.C. was asking for a $15 million subsidy from the federal government to help defray the cost of operating the crown-owned B.C. Ferries and to institute better service for north coast communities.

The issue of the ferries subsidy came to a head last fall when the federal government cancelled its $4 million a year subsidy to Northland Navigation, which was conducting a combined freight-passenger service to many isolated points.

North coast area residents have been complaining bitterly ever since about the inadequacy of replacement services.

Lang and Bennett said Tuesday's talks also dealt with development of northern railway systems for northwest

B.C. and the northeast coal development proposal.

Transport Minister Jack Davis has said twice in the current year an announcement on a ferry agreement is imminent.

Bennett said he does not agree with an assertion that the province is being "strung out" by the federal government in its negotiations, stressing that continued progress is being made.

Tax Repeal Challenged

NDP Leader Dave Barrett challenged Premier Bill Bennett Tuesday to stake his seat in the legislature on the issue of succession duties.

During debate on the Succession Duty Repeal Act, Barrett offered to give up his Vancouver East seat if Bennett agreed to resign his Kelowna seat and fight byelections on the issue of succession duty removal.

The NDP leader also challenged the premier to a television debate on the issue.

The government's intention to remove the succession duties, he said, is an offer to protect the traditional establishment.

Barrett said that in 1973 there were 13,300 estates assessed but only 1,906 were liable for succession duties. Of the 1,906 estates, 430 of those liable contributed $17 million or 70 per cent of the total amount received in 1973.

HANDICAP AID

Approval of a $160,000 grant to expand a handicapped employment preparation program in Surrey was announced Tuesday by Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm.

The money will go to the Surrey Rehabilitation Society for the development of a handicapped work activity project involving 25 to 30 physically, mentally, emotionally or educationally disadvantaged trainees.

The minister who is a former Surrey mayor said all those involved in the program are capable of working if provided with a few basic skills.

The program is the only one of its kind in the province.

Participants remain on the project for between six and 12 months and about 50 people are expected to complete the course each year.

It's Legally Yours... If You Come Back Alive

You may not be able to take it with you, but under a bill considered in the B.C. legislature Tuesday you can get it back.

The Survivorship and presumption of Death Amendment Act allows someone declared legally dead but who suddenly reappears to reclaim any assets yet undistributed.

The bill received unanimous approval in principle and passed through second reading stage with a minimum of debate.

Attorney-General Gordon Gordon said that "truth does stranger than fiction" it does sometimes happen that someone who is missing, then declared legally dead suddenly turns up as a "legally reincarnated" person.

Under the bill all assets undistributed would be returned to the "dead" person, but those assets distributed through the estate would legally belong to the people they were given to.

Liberals leader Gordon Gibson asked if the "sudden re-appearance" clause of the bill also applied to political parties.

Robbers Shocked

NORWICH, England (CP) — A 60-year-old landlord leapt naked from his bed in the middle of the night and kicked two would-be robbers out into the street. He said: "I would have chased them but being stark naked I could hardly go harrying up the street after them. Besides it was frosty and perishing cold. And they never got a sausage from my pub."

B.C.-Only Inflation Controls Would Be Disastrous: Williams

A "go-it-alone" B.C. wage control program after federal anti-inflation controls are ended would be "disastrous, unworkable and ineffective," Labor Minister Allan Williams said Tuesday.

"To have controls on in one province and not in the other would be disastrous," Williams said.

Williams stressed he was talking only for himself, not the government.

"I can't say there won't be (B.C.'s own program), ... I'm only expressing my opinion on the effectiveness of it."

The minister also said he saw no sense in keeping controls on the public after they are removed from the private sector, "at least not in the sense of controls as we know them ... with specified wage limits."

Premier Bill Bennett and Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said earlier the province is looking seriously at devising a wage control program after federal anti-inflation controls are lifted.

Williams and Wolfe have also said they would consider keeping the public sector under controls for a time after the private sector is back to normal.

Williams made his statements after an hour-long meeting with representatives of the B.C. Federation of Labor during which the federation presented a brief expressing "total opposition" to a provincial control program.

Wolfe said later in the day he agreed there might be some problems in having provincial controls in the private sector but said the government "still has to be concerned with the public sector."

Williams said a provincial control program on private industry would create two-way migration: firms would come into B.C. to get their employees under wage controls and workers would leave to get out of them.

Private industry, Williams said, crosses provincial boundaries, making it impossible for only one section to be controlled.

"Industry's relationship in other provinces would make it (provincial controls) ineffective," he said. "It would be ineffective."

Asked if he thought the end of the federal program would mean the end of price and wage controls in Canada, Williams said: "Yes, I believe so."

"To be effective at all, wage controls have to be dealt with on a national basis," he said.

Williams said he had a good meeting with the federation of labor representatives—"I didn't come out with any scars."

He said he reassured the federation his ministry is not planning any right-to-work legislation.

Federation secretary treasurer Len Guy said after the meeting he had heard persistent rumors there will be changes to the Labor Code of B.C. and the federation wanted to make its views known.

Williams appeared "somewhat sympathetic to the positions we put forward," Guy said.

He said Williams indicated he had no intention of introducing the kind of "rash and ill-considered" legislation feared by the federation.

WILLIAMS

NEW RN LAWS EYED

The provincial government introduced legislation Tuesday to update laws governing the discipline of registered nurses.

Health Minister Bob McClelland told reporters the Registered Nurses Amendment Act is designed to upgrade the entire act, particularly sections dealing with disciplinary action against nurses.

He said the amendments, introduced at the request of the B.C. Registered Nurses Association, would improve the appeal procedure to offer better protection to a nurse receiving disciplinary action from a discipline committee.

He added that disciplinary procedures under existing legislation are unclear.

Also introduced Tuesday was a bill which would allow for the appointment of one more judge to the B.C. Supreme Court.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom said there are currently four judges of the Supreme Court involved in matters outside the court system and there is a need for more judges in the province.

House Business Speeds Up After 'One-Shot' Filibuster

The legislature gave second reading to six bills Tuesday as house business sped up considerably following an opposition slowdown Monday.

Liberals

leader Gordon Gibson

one of the prime instigators of the slowdown, said Tuesday some progress has been made to clear up opposition complaints.

Opposition whips were protesting extra night sittings of the legislature called by the government and not receiving enough notice on what the house's order of business would be.

Gibson

said his three-hour filibuster Monday was only a "one-shot affair."

The legislature finally gave second reading Tuesday to the bill which would increase B.C. Hydro's borrowing power to $4.15 billion from $3.5 billion.

Second reading of the Pollution Control Amendment Act, which would allow the government to conscript people to assist with major pollution catastrophes such as oil spills, was passed by a vote of 33 to 16.

Also given second reading were bills which would allow married women to revert back to their maiden name or the surname they had prior to being married, and two house keeping bills dealing with farm income assurance and liquor laws.

U.S. Airlines Must Warn Passengers Can Be Bumped

WASHINGTON (UPI)—U.S. airlines must post official tariff book listing airline fares and regulations, but the government regulatory agency said it was "clearly unrealistic" to expect airline passengers to read tariff documents.

The Civil Aeronautics Board said Tuesday that bumped passengers may collect on-the-spot cash compensation for resulting delays.

The warnings already lie buried in thick official tariff book listing airline fares and regulations, but the government regulatory agency said it was "clearly unrealistic" to expect airline passengers to read tariff documents.

The board said a blunt statement of overbooking risks and rights must be displayed on all ticket counters and included with all tickets.

The board's order even dictates the wording of the statement.

Foreign as well as domestic airlines were included in the order, but the board said its requirement for a notice in the ticket envelope applies only to tickets sold in the United States.

A number of airlines have objected to public notices, saying the information already is contained in tariff documents.

Lorne Whyte Named Victorian Publisher

Business manager Lorne Whyte has been named publisher and acting president of the Victoria and news editor Ken Hinkins has been named managing editor effective immediately.

The appointments follow the retirement Monday night of president and publisher John Damgaard and the resignation Tuesday of managing editor Tony Simnett.

Damgaard, 43, said he would take a rest and then pursue other business interests.

He continues as owner but will not participate directly in the running of the company.

All operations will be directed by Whyte.

Simnett today said he had been considering leaving the Victorian for several weeks to become a freelancer.

"I was disappointed when John (Damgaard) retired; he was a good friend, and so I decided this would be an appropriate time to submit my resignation. I plan to continue to live and work in Victoria."

WORK SET AT $1.72M

Three contracts which are worth $1.72 million and which will provide jobs for more than 60 workmen have been awarded by the provincial public works department for downtown Victoria office buildings.

Mostread Masonry Ltd. of Burnaby will do brick and concrete block work for the government's new structure on Blanshard between Courtney and Broughton, a value of $952,367.

Cana Construction Ltd., Victoria, will install new court-rooms and facilities at the enlarged Law Courts for $713,000 and Ken Tobe Ltd., Victoria, will do masonry worth $18,260 at the Windermere building on Courtney.

The board's order even dictates the wording of the statement.

Foreign as well as domestic airlines were included in the order, but the board said its requirement for a notice in the ticket envelope applies only to tickets sold in the United States.

A number of airlines have objected to public notices, saying the information already is contained in tariff documents.

Big Pension Boost Studied For Disabled Canadian Vets

OTTAWA (CP)—Veterans Affairs Minister Dan MacDonald is conducting a review that could lead to substantial pension increases for the 140,000 wholly or partially disabled veterans receiving pensions.

The minister said in the Commons Tuesday that the review is aimed at seeing if the pensions can be increased to make up for the increase in the cost of living since 1972 when they were last changed.

The minister, who has been away from the Commons for a month, was responding to Jack Marshall (PC—Humber-St. Georges-St. Barbe) and Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre).

It is estimated that if the pensions were increased as suggested, it would cost between $30 million and $35 million a year.

That would mean that a veteran receiving a 100-per-cent disability pension would receive an increase of $500 a year.

The pension is based on the net income of a composite group of public servants selected by the pension commission.

In 1972, the government brought 100-per-cent disability pensions to the level of the composite group at the time and promised to review the pensions in the future.

Knowles said the composite group now is $500 a year ahead of the 100-per-cent pensioners. Veterans with less than 100-per-cent disability receive proportionately less pension.

MacDonald also said he is reviewing a pension for widows of veterans who have received less than 48-per-cent disability pensions.

The widows of recipients of 48-per-cent pensions or better now receive a widows pension. But widows of recipients of less than 48-per-cent disability pensions get nothing. If they are in need, they must go on welfare.

STANICK
must go east

Forced Move Protest

University of Victoria vice-president Dr. George Pedersen says the resignation of top-rated violinist Gerald Stanick shows discrimination by the Ottawa-based Canada Council against UVIC.

Stanick has been told he has to move to the University of Western Ontario or lose his Canada Council support.

Stanick, rated as one of North America's top violinists, submitted his resignation to UVIC effective July 1.

He has been head of the string section in the music department for three years.

Stanick said he is leaving because of his commitment to Quartet Canada — a highly rated string ensemble whose three members live in the east.

The quartet has Canada Council support.

The council now wants all four musicians on one campus — the University of Western Ontario.

Pedersen said he has instructed Dr. Peter Smith, Dean of Fine Arts, to write to Hugh Davidson, head of the council's music division, to get an explanation for the council's action.

He called the move "totally unmerited interference" and said he is incensed.

Jury Still In Huddle

The assize jury in a B.C. Supreme Court murder trial sat the night in a hotel after failing to reach a verdict following more than five hours deliberation Tuesday.

The jury returned to its deliberations this morning in the case of John Edward Aitken, 30, accused of first-degree murder by causing the death of Alice Monique Dhillon, 30, while committing rape.

Her beaten and strangled body was found Sept. 9 on a grassy slope between Anson Crescent and the beach at Macaulay Point in Esquimalt.

The jury returned three

Twists, Turns Between Here, There

Quite curious, the little twists life takes sometimes.

Right now, in New Zealand, the leading "Maori" carver is a man named Norman Clark. That's a very un-Maori sounding name, you say. And it should be, too. For Norm Clark is Canadian-born and bred on the Prairies.

And while this is going on, at the northern end of the scale Indians on Vancouver Island are being forced to buy New Zealand wool to make their traditional Indian sweaters because they just can't get enough local wool.

While living and carving in sunny Blenheim on the top tip of New Zealand's South Island, Clark has cut a place for himself in Maori history with his beautiful creations: canoes, tikis and grimacing warriors hewn from native woods.

Fame spread and now he is generally regarded as the "expert" in his field. So much so, the government recently asked him to teach the dying art of carving to Maori children!

When Queen Elizabeth opened the Commonwealth Games in Christchurch in 1974 she was presented with the most exquisite example of Maori art officials could find, a canoe carved — that's right — by Canada's Norm Clark!

A curious twist. And almost as curious is the thought of Canadian Indians making their famous Cowichan sweaters with Down Under wool that has travelled thousands of miles.

Since 1926 — the year she was married — Flora Joseph of the Songhees Indian Band in Esquimalt has been buying raw wool, carding (combing), spinning it and knitting it into sweaters. She makes, her fans and customers will tell you, the best Indian sweaters on the Island.

Flora Joseph and her spinning machine

max low

Flora has used only wool from Island sheep. But, like many other Indians, she has been forced to switch to New Zealand wool.

She sits behind the old spinning machine her late husband made for her in 1938 out of water pipes and an ancient Singer wheel and says it's a little sad.

A man who runs one of the big trading companies is buying up all the wool he can, Flora says.

"And we can't ever get any now from the farms. If we want it, we have to buy it takes from three to four weeks to make a sweater.

Flora Joseph's name is famous abroad. During the Second World War many of her sweaters ended up in New Zealand, Alaska, Britain, Germany and France. Her work is still in great demand today and she gets anywhere from $75 to $100 for her beautifully-made sweaters.

"I was once offered $225 for a cape I made," she says with a smile. "But I had already sold it — and I only made one."

"My work is nothing like you see in town. I guess it's because I enjoy making sweaters and the spinning is done so the sweaters are really neat. And I measure people to make them fit."

A noted tribal dancer who had a dance group here in the 1950s, Flora is passing her skills on to children. Each day, Flora travels out to teach spinning, carding of wool, basket weaving (which she says is just about a lost art now), beadwork, dancing and Indian legends (storytelling) to students at three Sooke schools. And she hopes soon to get the youngsters on the Songhees Reserve started with tribal dancing lessons.

"We're using the New Zealand wool at the Sooke schools," Flora says. "It is much finer and softer than the Island wool, yet I wouldn't say it was better for sweaters. I would much rather use our local wool but it's so hard to get and the thing is, they charge more for it, particularly the black and brown colours."

Flora Joseph doesn't see anything strange in using New Zealand wool.

"The Maori people are very like us," she says. "Their carving, their spinning, their basket weaving is almost the same as ours. I feel very close to them."

Wicked Water Beds Go Legit

By HUMPHREY DAVY
Times Staff

Waterbeds — remember how deliciously decadent and wicked they appeared back in 1969? — have become legit.

Once the status (and sexual) symbol of the younger generation, waterbeds have now become a commodity of the middle class, and in some cases, of the wealthy.

They are big business, especially here in B.C.

Last year more than 15,000 of them, worth a cool $4 million, were sold in the province.

And they don't come cheap. The average price, including mattress, liner, a heater and frame, ranges from $400 to $1,200 with the price tag for a super "floatation" sleep hitting the $2,000 mark.

Brian Trotto, manager of Pacific Waterbeds, recalls the impact the beds had when they first appeared on the market in 1969.

"They soon became a craze among young people who saw them in a sense, as a sex symbol."

In fact pocket electricators, along with pocket electronic calculators, were considered almost the top marketing items of the decade, Trotto recalled.

The popularity of the bed then began to wane due to tales of bursting bags and flooded apartments, he said.

"Some of the tales may have been true," he said. "This was probably due to poor materials."

Trotto said this has all changed. Manufacturers now produce a special vinyl liner which is hard to puncture and seams have been greatly improved.

People today buy waterbeds for their comfort, he said.

He claimed the sleeping surface moulds itself to the natural contours of the body, thus providing better sleep than a conventional mattress.

Another advantage is that the mattress can be made harder or softer to suit individual tastes. The heater is thermostatically controlled.

"Some people with spinal or back problems have acquired waterbeds and I have had no complaints," he said.

"Of course, the claim that waterbeds will do wonders for your sex life, is also perfectly true," he added with a grin.

But Trotto said some people are still fearful that the mattresses will burst, or their weight will collapse the floor.

Others think they may get seasick.

"When they ask me if a ceiling will crumble under its weight, I tell them to pick up the phone and check with a building inspector," he said. "Of course, this won't happen."

The weight of an average mattress, he said, is equal to that of 10 persons — about 1,600 pounds.

However, some condominium projects and apartments require water bed owners to carry liability insurance to cover leaks or other mishaps.

"Leaks can easily be repaired," Trotto said.

Trotto said most waterbeds sold in British Columbia are made in California. One company manufactures them in Eastern Canada.

Anderson Case Up Thursday

The Supreme Court of Canada on Thursday will hear the Crown's appeal of the acquittal of former city police constable Thomas Anderson on an assault charge.

The case goes back more than three years to New Year's Day, 1974, when George Kenneth Harris, then 18, of Victoria, charged he was kicked in the groin by police during a disturbance in Scott's Cafe on Yates Street.

Anderson, 29, was convicted of assault, causing bodily harm and fined $200 by provincial court Judge Les Bewley of Vancouver in May, 1974, and subsequently quit the force.

He appealed to the B.C. Court of Appeal and won acquittal in February, 1976. That same month, the Crown filed for leave to appeal the acquittal and leave was granted in March, 1976.

Ruling Monday On Night Meets

Sanich council will decide Monday whether to hold night council meetings on a six-month trial basis.

The finance and legislative committee decided Monday to recommend the trial.

Council introduced afternoon meetings during the 1975 lockout to save fuel and never returned to evening sessions.

The return to evening meetings is being urged by Ald. John Mika, who topped the polls in November.

He is also proposing open meetings, the right to address council by majority consent, the publishing of agendas and minutes, and the use of cameras and recording equipment by the press.

Mika failed Monday in a bid to have night meetings tried for a 12-month period.

Ald. David Paterson also failed to have alternating afternoon and night council sittings on a three-month trial.

The committee agreed oral presentations should be allowed by residents if the municipal clerk is given 24 hours' notice.

The mayor and four aldermen attending also agreed agendas and minutes could be published providing it costs Sanich nothing.

They said the press should be willing to do this free as a public service.

"It wasn't a goaltender's game," was the way Murray Bannerman summed up Tuesday's Western Canada Hockey League game at Memorial Arena.

The Victoria Cougars netminder preferred to talk about the offence, perhaps because he figures he's part of it.

Bannerman picked up an

another assist

other assist as the Cougars overpowered Flin Flon Bombers 10-4 in a penalty-stuffed affair. One assist hardly measures up to the production efforts of George Robertson, Curt Fraser, Archie Henderson or Paul Enquist, but it could be enough to get Bannerman into the WCHL record book.

It marks the third straight game on home ice that Bannerman has recorded a scoring point. Each time, Enquist has been the goal-setter after taking passes from Bannerman.

While the goaltender looks on "Bannerman and Enquist" as the "hot new scoring combination" others might be more impressed with a new line of Robertson, Fraser and Henderson.

Fraser switched places with Bill Johnson, a shuffle agreed upon Monday by assistant coach Cliff Lemmartz and owner-manager Pat Ginnell. Johnson lined up with Gary Lupul and Gregg Anderson.

The switch didn't do much for the Lupul-centred line, but paid off handsomely for the Robertson - Fraser-Henderson combination.

Robertson scored three times and set up two tallies: Fraser counted two goals and an assist while Henderson, turning in his best game since Christmas, picked up four assists.

The Lupul line figured in two goals — by defenceman Mark Robinson and Leroy Heck.

Enquist added two goals, running his total to 12 in the past 12 games, and Dennis Fenske scored the other.

Rey Hudson, with two Jordy Douglass and Steve Blue scored for the Bombers.

While the out-pouring of goals pleased Lemmartz, a "ladies' night" turnout of 2,003 was less enthralled with a second-period brawl that produced 122 minutes in penalties.

It was touched off after Heck scored his goal. As the Victoria defenceman skated past Flin Flon's goal, netminder Don Crockett tripped Heck. Heck came back to gesture threateningly, and then Anderson and Simeon puffed squared off. Lupul also had a round with Stomphor and all the players were chased from the game when the refused to heed Lavallee's order to go to their respective benches.

Stampnor was assessed the gross misconduct for splitting on Anderson during their tussle.

In all, Lavallee dished out 234 minutes in penalties — 119 to Victoria and 115 to the Bombers.

While the threat was there as the players milled about, the second-period squabble can hardly rate as an "ugly brawl."

While the threat was there as the players milled about, the second-period squabble can hardly rate as an "ugly brawl."

However, a fight that broke out with only 20 seconds remaining in the game could have been more violent.

Fraser tangled with Flin Flon's Erle Switzer and both were chased to the penalty box with minors.

Smart intervention by linesmen Mike Woodley and Rob Barlow averted another fight.

However, Victoria's Kevin Clarkson — who had come out of the player's box — then engaged Switzer but again the officials were quick to intervene.

Both Clarkson and Switzer were assessed majors, and the Victoria player also was tagged with a game misconduct for instigating the fight.

On another night, Clarkson's appearance might have touched off another brawl. Fortunately, "thin" benches and the officials' good work prevented it.

The second-period incident had left Flin Flon with only 11 skaters and Victoria with 10.

Seasons, Lowered Limits Should Not Be Necessary

Some rambling notes along the trail:

It just doesn't make sense... Sports fishermen shouldn't be asked to accept cutbacks in catch limits or a closure to winter chinook fishing in waters from Sooke to Oak Bay... These are two of the rule changes under consideration by federal fisheries officials right at a time when sports fishermen are being asked to support the federal-provincial salmon enhancement program through a saltwater sports fishing license scheme... There are valid reasons for going into license when $3 of the proposed $5 will be returned by enhancing sports stocks... But curtailing the four-salmon daily limit and setting up specific seasons doesn't appear to be a fair solution to the problem posed by a few fish-hogs among the sport fishermen... Commercial fishermen account for 98 per cent of the catch in British Columbia right now and the fish hogs could be reduced drastically by increasing the penalties for selling, buying or wasting sport-caught salmon... Providing, of course, the law is enforced... Let Fisher Minister Romeo LeBlanc know your feelings on the matter.

And, speaking about penalties, I see the federal government is in the process of adding some much-needed muscle to laws dealing with poaching and polluting... The bill recently introduced in the Commons applies to both fresh and saltwater throughout Canada... It allows the fisheries department to prohibit or dictate modifications to any plans that might destroy or disrupt aquatic habitats where fish spawn or feed... It also expands laws to cover existing industries that foul waterways while the present law can only place controls on new undertakings... This move deserves support.

George Reid, the fish and wildlife branch regional fisheries biologist for Vancouver Island, says an obstruction was recently removed from Bear Creek for "under $1,000".... Eliminating the blockage on this stream, which flows into the Cowichan River near Skutz Falls, opens up an additional five miles of excellent steelhead habitat at a nominal cost... Last fall, an obstruction on the Salmon River was blasted at a cost of only $200... This move opened up access to about 10 miles of spawning and rearing area on the Salmon itself and another 10 miles in its tributaries for salmon, steelhead and trout.

Amazing, isn't it?... Well, maybe not too much... Labor Minister Allan Williams tells us it will be about six weeks before a special cabinet committee will come to a decision for or against the proposed Revelstoke dam at a cost of $1.5 billion... B.C. Hydro, meanwhile, is already going ahead on a provisional permit granted by water commissioner Howard deBeck... By the time the cabinet committee reaches its decision, I wonder how much money and manpower will be tied up in the project?... These commitments will be hard to reverse... I suspect a majority of those cabinet committee members have already made up their minds.

Charley Has No Choice

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn and his No. 1 adversary, Oakland A's owner Charles Finley, both will be in Dallas today, but Finley says he may not meet with the commissioner.

Kuhn wants to meet with Finley to discuss the Paul Lindblad affair. Also in attendance will be Lindblad, a popular pitcher these days, Eddie Robinson, Texas Rangers vice-president, and the usual legion of lawyers, including Dick Moss, counsel for the Major League Baseball Players' Association.

In Chicago, Finley said Tuesday he would fly to Dallas but hedged on attending the meeting.

"I'm going down to Dallas, then I'll meet my attorney there and talk to him about whether we'll attend the meeting or not," he said. "Dammit, we just might call off a meeting of our own and invite Bowie to it."

The Associated Press reported Tuesday that Finley, despite his squawking and posturing, will meet with Kuhn.

"He had to come," said a source. "If he didn't come, Kuhn would have seized the

NO MORE WAITING

CHICAGO (AP) — Owner Charles Finley of Oakland A's said Tuesday he is finished waiting for Dick Allen and wouldn't sign the one-time slugger if he calls now.

Last week, Finley said the signing of the troublesome Allen to an American League baseball contract was imminent and he was only waiting for Allen's telephone call to complete the deal.

"There's an old song you know: 'sittin' all alone by the telephone waitin' for it to ring,'" Finley said. "Well, I sure as hell am not waiting any longer. I couldn't care less where he (Allen is.)" before completing any deal involving a star player and a substantial amount of money.

Kuhn then blocked the sale, which angered Texas owner Brad Corbett and Finley, who has been constantly at odds with the commissioner. A decision on Finley's lawsuit against Kuhn for the commissioner's voiding the sale last year of Oakland players Vida Blue, Rollie Fingers and Joe Rudi for $3.5 million is expected later this month.

Lindblad, a left-handed reliever who has been barred from working out with Texas but is working into shape in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., with New York Yankees, had not planned to go to the meeting.

The players' association says Lindblad is an "innocent party" to the dispute between Finley and Kuhn.

Judge William Ostler Tuesday sentenced a 20-year-old man to 2½ years in prison for a Jan. 6 bank robbery.

Ian McClardy Smith, formerly of 1150 Hadfield, pleaded guilty Feb. 11 to a charge of robbery after he was arrested in Edmonton and returned to Victoria.

Smith admitted robbing the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce branch at 493 Superior of $1,645. He approached a woman teller and said, "I would like to make a withdrawal," before shoving a note which read: "Put money in a bag."

He then escaped on foot and changed clothing in a third-floor washroom at the Provincial Museum, stuffing some of the clothes he wore during the holdup into a towel rack.

Ostler said that the "unprecedented, alarming, and quite intolerable increase" in holdups in Greater Victoria must be stopped and said the sentence must be a warning to others.

Defence-lawyer Derek Brindille said his client admitted contemplating the crime the day before but said that Smith, did not intend to give the impression, nor did he ever consider the use, of a weapon.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Smith kept a hand in his pocket during the incident and Ostler agreed that although there was no evidence of an actual weapon, there was a simulation.

Brindille said Smith needed about $300 for rent, food and payment of a personal debt but could not offer an explanation as to why most of the money was spent on buying a car.

Mulligan said Smith made a total of three car transactions before fleeing to Edmonton.

Brindille said his client, who attended Esquimalt high school, was more frightened than the subject of the robbery and was remorseful about the entire episode.

Ostler, who said his task of sentencing a young man was a difficult one, granted an application by Monna Huscroft, representing the bank, for compensation of $1,645.

Mulligan told the court that a forensic psychiatrist who examined 24-year-old Roger McDonald at Wilkinson Road jail was of the opinion McDonald was not fit to stand trial on a charge of attempted murder.

McDonald, charged in connection with an incident Friday night in which 33-year-old Al Kaukainen, of the Quintro Manor Apartments at 3900 Quadra, suffered a bullet wound in his abdomen from a .303 rifle shot, first appeared Monday before Judge Fred Green but was remanded one day for a psychiatric examination by Dr. Kenneth McLeod.

Mulligan's application for a fitness hearing Thursday morning was granted by Ostler.

McLeod will also be asked to look at 41-year-old Derek Richard Olson, of 710 Fort.

Olson is charged with 13 counts of false pretences, 12 of passing worthless cheques at The Bay, 1701 Douglas, in amounts ranging from $2.17 to $31.03, and one of passing a worthless cheque in the amount of $23.49 at Ben Hill's Sport Shop, 1815 Douglas, between Nov. 18 and Feb. 10.

Legal-aid lawyer Jasper Bomhof told the court Olson was a 25-year-old patient at Essondale on the Lower Mainland and requested a remand until March 15 so that an observation could be made.

A 26-year-old man who appeared before Ostler only a matter of hours after he was caught inside Goodwill Enterprises, 220 Bay, at 2:45 a.m. Tuesday, pleaded guilty to breaking and entering.

Gerald Gordon Mindenham, of 1784 Lansdowne, was caught by Victoria city police inside the building, hiding under a rack of clothing, court was told. A flashlight and pair of pliers were found in his possession.

Ostler ordered a pre-sentence report for March 22 and released Mindenham on his own recognizance in the sum of $500.

guilty to mischief and was fined $100 and ordered to pay compensation for damages.

Dale Edwin MacDonald, who gave an address of 2601 Blanshard to police but said in court he lived in Alert Bay, pleaded guilty to pouring half-a-gallon of white paint down an elevator shaft at 213 Ridge Road, causing about $75 damage.

A date of April 1 was set for preliminary hearing and Ross was released on $1,500 surety bail.

Andrew David Wood, 30, of 336 Gorge Road East, was charged with rape and gross indecency in connection with a Feb. 1 incident.

He elected trial by judge and jury and a preliminary hearing date of June 2 was set. Wood was released on an appearance notice.

A 17-year-old youth pleaded

Seniors Provide Phone Service

A telephone reassurance program has been started by the Victoria Silver Threads.

It is a free service for persons living alone who may be convalescing, handicapped, temporarily alone while the family is vacationing or who would just enjoy a chat on a regular time.

If the phone is not answered, a volunteer visits the home to ensure everything is all right.

More information is available from Mrs. C. Stringfellow at the Centennial Square Silver Threads.

In other changes, the Saanich centre now allows associate memberships for single people, widows or widowers between 50 and 60 years of age.

The lower-age membership is open to all such seniors in the area, but only the Saanich facilities can be used.

There are two other restrictions — associate members do not have voting privileges, and because the group receives a preferred rate for its out-of-town bus trips, those without senior citizen cards are not allowed to participate.

But all other programs and activities are open to the younger associate members for an annual membership fee of $5.

TOBOGGAN GIRL DIES

PRINCE GEORGE — Six-year-old Heather Gordon, who

WEST COVINA, Calif. — A policeman first hailed as a hero for shooting his way out of an abduction was held today on suspicion of kidnapping and murdering his alleged captor.

Authorities said Tuesday it appeared that 19-year-old David Dominguez was taken into custody and then shot by police officer Billy Joe McIlvain of San Gabriel.

McIlvain, 32, told police Monday afternoon when he emerged from his home, in which he said he was being held hostage, that he had overcome his captor.

A few hours later he was jailed for investigation of kidnap and murder.

"Things he was saying just didn't look true to us," said deputy police chief Craig MacEacham.

In his version, McIlvain told police that two gang members, Dominguez and another youth, forced his car to the side of the road and forced him at gunpoint to drive home.

McIlvain said the youth apparently were seeking revenge for a fellow gang member whom McIlvain had helped send to jail.

When police surrounded McIlvain's house, they were greeted by gunfire. They tried to negotiate with McIlvain's alleged captor, but McIlvain repeatedly got on the phone and said the youth refused to talk to police.

After more gunfire, McIlvain left the house, saying he had caught Dominguez off guard, pulled a handgun hidden in his foot and pumped five bullets into the youth.

But, police said, the report began to unravel when Dominguez's mother and friends reported that McIlvain kidnapped the youth.

David Lorenz, a friend of Dominguez's, said the bizarre events began while he and Dominguez were chatting outside the home of Dominguez's girl-friend. He said McIlvain came up to them, pulled a badge and told Dominguez to come along or face arrest for carrying a concealed weapon.

After hearing Lorenz's story and accounts from others who had witnessed the "arrest" of Dominguez, police issued a statement saying they had "probable cause to retain McIlvain for possible homicide."

PEEP INTO A PRIVATE BANKBOOK

Lawyer Earned $500,000 in Year

By ROBERT KAISER

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The publication of private financial data by appointees to the Carter administration has provided a rare glimpse of the earnings of corporate lawyers, a group that traditionally keeps such matters private.

The new data shows that Cyrus Vance, the new secretary of state, earned $250,444 last year from his senior partnership in the New York firm of Simpson, Thacher and Bartlett — a figure regarded as about average for a senior partner of a major firm, according to numerous lawyers interviewed this week.

But Joseph Califano, the new secretary of health, education and welfare, earned more than $555,000 as a senior partner of Williams, Connolly & Califano in Washington.

Lawyers in other firms expressed surprise — and in many cases admiration — for the size of Califano's earnings.

Califano earned more last year than Thomas Murphy, the chairman of General Motors, made in 1975, according to figures published by Business Week magazine. That year Murphy was the 15th highest-paid business executive in the United States.

Put another way, Califano earned more in a week than the average American worker made in a year in 1975.

Califano declined to discuss his income with a reporter. The senior and founding partner of his old firm, Edward Bennett Williams, said, "whatever anyone is paid over here, he's worth it."

Williams declined to discuss the apparent ability of his firm to generate much more income than other big law firms here and in New York.

Williams said, "I regret deeply that they (the Carter Administration) felt it was necessary to publish past earnings."

Williams said he thought a statement of net worth and private holdings would have satisfied the requirements of the public with the public.

Williams did say there was "no valid explanation" for the large size of Califano's earnings last year. "The facts are the facts," he added.

Other lawyers speculated that Williams himself, as the senior partner of the firm, probably made more than Califano in 1976.

Major corporate law firms generally make money in two ways: By billing for hourly work done for clients at rates ranging from about $40 to about $200 an hour and by collecting annual retainers from major clients.

Several lawyers said a firm dominated by one or two strong personalities like Williams & Connolly was likely to earn bigger fees than a more staid corporate firm.

They noted that Williams has won some very big fees in successful courtroom actions, his specialty.

The firm declines to publicize the names of its clients, but public records indicate it has represented Coca-Cola Co., Pfizer, the drug manufacturer, The Washington Post, El Paso Natural Gas and others.

Williams himself has represented John Connally, the former Texas governor; Jimmy Hoffa, the former Teamsters union president, and many other famous individuals.

Young Greater Victoria cellist Gary Russell was one of three winners of the Vancouver Woman's Musical Club Scholarship Competition held recently in Vancouver. Adjudicators were: Blanche Winograd and Sydne Beck of Victoria, U.S.A.

Gary is a student of James Hunter at Victoria Conservatory of Music and a fourth year student in the music department of the University of Victoria.

He plays with UVic instrumental ensembles, has played with Victoria Symphony and was first place winner — tried with soprano Jane MacKenzie — in a competition for a concerto performance with the University Chamber Orchestra.

Kids, Cooks, Lent Observers Really Go for Salmon Pizzas

By MARY MOORE

This will pale three types: the kids, the cook and the Lent observers. Salmon Pizzas are easy, flavorful, pretty and filling. Because I object to paying 52¢ for a package of eight hamburger buns I made my own from Monster Dough so that reduced the total cost.

Mary Moore

SALMON PIZZAS

(16 individual)

2 7 1/2-oz. cans salmon, including juice and mashed bones (for calcium)
2 c. grated Cheddar cheese, lightly packed
1/2 tsp. salt
2 tbsp. grated or finely chopped onion.

1/2 c. chopped black olives
1/2 c. chopped canned or bottled pinquito

1/2 c. mayonnaise
12 drops Tabasco sauce (1/2 tsp.)
Mozzarella cheese slices cut into strips

8 hamburger buns split.
Flake the salmon with the juice and mash the bones. Add the cheese, salt, onion, olives, pinquito, mayonnaise and Tabasco and mix. Split hamburger buns in half and spread 1/4 cup mixture right to edge on each. Cut Mozzarella cheese into strips 3x3" and place three over each. Top with slice of ripe olive.

Place about five inches below preheated broiler until salmon mixture is hot and cheese is bubbly. Serve at once.

Two of these are a bit too much for some children and most women but the men will want two. Serve with a green vegetable and a relish tray with dill pickles.

By Lynn and Joel Rapp

Dear Lynn and Joel: I read your column regularly and am always amazed how you are able to identify plants from the skimpiest descriptions. Maybe you can help me. I have recently acquired a small bush which resembles a miniature cherry tree. It was grown from a seed in one summer and is 20 inches tall. The berries on it look like cherries, but are full of tiny seeds like a tomato. I was told it was a house plant and would die if left out after the frost hits. Can you tell me what it is and how it should be cared for? — S.A.M.

Dear S.A.M.: Your description of a Jerusalem cherry could hardly be called skimpy! If only others would follow your example when writing and give more detailed information.

Your plant is indeed a house plant, or even can be cultivated outdoors during the summer. Good, indirect light and evenly moist soil plus spring feedings once a month should keep it in good health. But one tip: the fruits may be

Quick Cinnamon Rolls

1/4 teaspoon soda
1/4 cup white sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 cup buttermilk
3 tablespoons salad oil
2 tablespoons water
1/4 cup melted butter
1/2 cup brown sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 cup finely chopped nuts

Mix together soda, white sugar, salt and 1 cup of the flour. Heat buttermilk and salad oil until just below boiling or until small bubbles gather around edge of pan. Add milk to flour mixture and beat well. Stir in the rest of flour and knead dough until smooth and elastic, using more flour if needed. Butter 12 muffin cups or tins. Mix the water with half the melted butter and half of the brown sugar, dividing mixture in muffin tins. Roll dough out to a rectangle, 12 by 15 inches. Spread dough with remaining butter and brown sugar, sprinkling with cinnamon and nuts if desired. Roll dough into a round and cut into 12 slices, placing in muffin tins. Set to rise in warm place for about 1 hour, or until doubled. Bake at 350 degrees about 25 minutes. Turn rolls out of warm pans.

SALT TIED TO HEART PROBLEMS

family

SAN ANTONIO Tex. (UPI)—There is "very persuasive" evidence that salt in foods promotes the development of high blood pressure in people whose inherited traits make them susceptible to it, a Massachusetts specialist says.

Furthermore, Dr. Lot B. Page said he believes lifelong, low-salt diets enable people of some cultures to avoid the ailment that now afflicts an estimated 26 million North Americans.

The American Heart Association says high blood pressure, or hypertension, is a leading cause of disease and death. It can result in stroke, heart failure and kidney disease.

"We know that high blood pressure has its roots in early life," said Page, a hypertension authority from Newton-Wellesley Hospital, Newton Lower Falls, Mass.

"If we could do something to alter the salt habits of our children, we might make a tremendous impact on this whole vast public health problem."

According to dietary sources, the standard North American diet contains about 5,000 mg of sodium and is often more due to the use of snack foods," Page said in a report.

If the North American public, with the help of the food industry, would switch to a low-salt diet, Page said he believes anywhere from 50 to 90 per cent of high blood pressure cases could be eliminated in one generation.

He said research indicates most North Americans who develop high blood pressure inherit a predisposition to high blood pressure which is strong evidence that low salt intake prevents and high salt intake promotes hypertension in susceptible individuals," he said.

Page cited studies of eight isolated tribal groups in the Solomon Islands to support his hypothesis. He said blood pressure was higher in three groups whose diets included abundant salt and lower in those who had low-salt diets.

triggered by salt. Some people, he said, may never develop high blood pressure regardless of how much salt they consume.

Fashion, sewing tricks, converting your own designs to a pattern that fits — this is what Gail Fromson did for ten years pouring out advice for the Homemaking Service of the Vancouver Sun.

Gail has worked for the Extension Department at the University of Alberta lecturing to women's groups on self-improvement, fashion, poise and charm. She has taught modeling classes and had the occasion to open a new branch in Calgary for a national modeling school.

Gail's specialty is fabrics. Her ten years with fashion importers and domestic lines in Vancouver gave her the experience to know how to choose fabrics, color coordination, the characteristics of fabrics, and the cutting and making of patterns.

"There is no limit to the kind of garments the homemaker can sew, if she can get professional pattern fit before she attempts to cut her fabric, coupled with the right choice of fabric — the kind that holds its shape, particularly when working with knits — she is perfectly capable of turning out a custom tailored garment."

Gail is now free-lancing, bringing her vast background of knowledge and practical experience that cannot be found in any textbook to local ladies who sew. She will be here to give tips on the professional secrets of the alteration of patterns, and will show how anyone can make a pattern simply and make that pattern fit. She will also introduce a new pattern making method and will give her own fabulous tips on design.

Two Wonder Foods: Yogurt and Peanut Butter

By RUTH FREMES and ZAK SABRY

If there is such a thing as a wonder food, yogurt would surely earn the name. It's eaten the world over. Splashed on black bread in Russia, sold as a snack on the streets of Yugoslavia, and mixed into all manner of cooked dishes in Armenia. It comes with a reputation for health and longevity that's attractive to North Americans. We've latched onto the yogurt cult, some of us with more zeal than others, but enough to have changed to happier states after they've digest it. The milk protein in yogurt is partially predigested and the lactic acid has dissolved some of the calcium. So, the protein and calcium are more easily absorbed during digestion.

The bacteria in yogurt, by breaking some of the milk sugar-into lactic acid create an atmosphere in which gas and putrefaction cannot live. It's a gaseous stomach and bowel that have changed to happier states after they've had this starter goes on and on.

Another wonder food for many householders is peanut butter.

Originally, the peanut was cultivated for animal feed but now more than half the crop feeds us and probably most of that half is in the form of peanut butter.

It's easy to make yogurt at home, if you have a wide mouthed vacuum jar in the cupboard and some yogurt in the refrigerator. Heat one quart of fresh milk (skim milk, if you're calorie conscious) until it's warm. Test it on your wrist as you do a baby's bottle. Add three tablespoons of skim milk powder, if you have it, for extra nutrition, and then stir in  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup of prepared yogurt. Warning! Use only a yogurt made of milk and bacterial culture, nothing more. Stir milk and yogurt gently together, pour into a clean, wide mouthed thermos, cover tightly and leave overnight.

Uncover the next morning

Peanuts are oily nuts and when they are crushed to make a spread, the oils rise to the top. The oils will eventually go rancid. To avoid rancidity, manufacturers process peanut butter to have a shelf life that is longer than yours or mine. That peanut butter is almost indestructible.

We don't believe that processing is necessary nor beneficial and since there are no legislative controls over the amount of sugar or unsaturated fat that can be added to peanut butter, we recommend that you search for natural butters. They are easy to spot for the oil on top. Also, check for the peanut butter with the lightest color as the darker-colored butters have been roasted for longer and the risk of nutrient loss, specifically vitamin B1, is higher.

Peanut butter is a good, though fatty food. We mention that as a caution to adults who want to control their weight and fat intake. Two tablespoons of peanut butter have 190 calories and 16 grams of fat, an equivalent amount of skim milk yogurt has 40 calories and no fat. Active kids do well on peanut butter as they burn off the calories before you know it.

Peanut butter is a good protein supplement to the diet, a fair source of calcium, iron, thiamine and riboflavin and an excellent source of niacin. Mixed with bread in the ubiquitous peanut butter sandwich, peanut butter has the stuff that makes heads of state ... look what it did for young Jimmy Carter.

GOURMET CREAMED SPINACH

This recipe will definitely put fresh spinach on your weekly grocery order. Rich side dish, especially good with chops and eggs — makes spinach a "Company" dish —

1 lb. fresh spinach
1-2 garlic cloves
1/2 cup butter
1/2 tsp. nutmeg
3 Tbsp. flour
1 cup milk
salt and pepper

Wash spinach well, be sure to pick it over carefully. Simmer gently in covered saucepan. Meanwhile, on a large cutting board chop the garlic finely. In another heavy saucepan or double boiler melt the butter, remove from heat, stir in flour, add milk and stir over low heat until thick, season with nutmeg. The sauce will be thick, drain spinach juice into it and keep warm. Now chop spinach with the garlic, until very very fine. Combine with sauce and season with salt and pepper. Keep warm.

Good French Bread Easy to Make... and to Eat

In recent weeks I've written a couple of columns on bread-making, one for the standard white loaf and the second for a rather difficult "health" bread of wholewheat and rye flours.

The interest in bread-making at home must be tremendous, because each of these recipes brought in a huge volume of telephone calls and mail. I'm sorry if I keep you waiting for replies but I write them all myself, and it's a big job on my own. Don't worry though, I will reply.

As I expected, the health bread gave some people trouble. It is not an easy bread to make, especially in the kneading which is very hard work indeed.

One lady wrote a most charming letter to say that she and her family liked the standard white loaf so much that it is all they eat now. "I have not bought one loaf of bread since I cut that first one," she informed me.

However, the biggest number of queries came on a French-style loaf, with many cooks saying how much they would like to make and serve on to friends.

A number of readers have the idea that good French bread is difficult to produce, but I don't know where they got this impression because I've always found it one of the easiest of all breads to produce at home. The only real problem is that it goes so fast.

FRENCH BREAD:

Scald together a half cup of milk and three-quarters of a cup of water.

Pour into a big bowl and add one tablespoon granulated sugar, two teaspoons salt and two tablespoons of your choice of shortening. Stir well until the shortening melts and you have a smooth even liquid. Now put it aside to cool.

In a bowl, a small one this time, dissolve one teaspoon sugar and one-quarter teaspoon ground or dried ginger into half a cup of lukewarm water (100°F)... it will feel slightly warm on the inside of your wrist.

Over the stirred liquid sprinkle one envelope of active dried yeast, and please check the shelf age of the yeast — it will be dated something like NOV77, which means of course November 1977.

Most of the yeast granules will sink, but a healthy layer will float on top so don't disturb it, leave it and it will expand and spread on its own.

Despite the abundance of printed material published by governments, employers and financial institutions, most Canadians are somewhat hazy about the different pension and retirement plans from which they might benefit.

The 20-page booklet "After The Gold Watch" describes the most common pension and retirement plans. Reading this wealth of information in one publication will make it easier for you to decide if, when the time comes, your retirement income will be adequate.

According to the booklet, most Canadians can count on three main sources of income after retirement: Government plans, pension plans at their place of work and personal plans, such as the Registered Retirement Savings Plan.

Because benefits paid by government plans change frequently, the amounts mentioned in this booklet could be somewhat outdated by the time you read them. For the latest scale of benefits, call the pension office of the Government of Canada (or Quebec) in your area.

One of these loaves will make a super garlic bread for a special occasion.

Crush and then chop fine three cloves of fresh garlic and pound into a wad of fresh butter or margarine and leave to blend flavours.

Take a cooled, firm loaf and with a saw knife cut down deep without cutting through the bottom crust, so the loaf looks like a book with open leaves — make the slices at least two inches apart.

Smear the butter-garlic mixture between each slice, and any leftovers over the outer crust. Wrap in foil, leaving the ends just a little open and bake in a oven for 35-40 minutes. Then serve in the

DEAR ABBY: I have a so-called girlfriend. I am the girlfriend. I have gone with Arthur for 10 years, and I am pretty sick of this setup. I met his mother just once, when Arthur brought her to the eye doctor. He let me go along for the ride. He never told her I was his girlfriend, though. The problem is, Arthur's mother has money, and she says if he marries me, she will leave it all to the church.

She should consider becoming a "ham" radio operator. Amateur radio permits long-distance communication all over the world for free except for the initial price of the equipment one needs.

It's a great hobby, but I'm not so sure female hams are kosher. (Ha, Ha!) — IDEA MAN

DEAR MAN: Great idea! And female hams are indeed kosher. I'm told that there are approximately 12,000 licensed female hams.

DEAR ABBY: Do you know what the only absolutely fool-proof method of birth control is? —OK

DEAR ABBY: I am a 50-year-old married man who is fairly successful. My wife and I raised a son and daughter — both of whom are now married.

I never qualified as the world's best father — or even close to it. In fact, I was always too busy to be the kind of father I should have been to my son. We never had a really good father-son relationship, but luckily he turned out all right.

Six months ago, I saw an ad for "Big Brothers" — an organization of men who volunteer to take a fatherless boy to a sports event, lunch, supper, or just let him hang around on a Sunday afternoon.

Impulsively, I volunteered my services and lined up an 11-year-old boy from a broken home. I picked him up and brought him to my home, and we spent the afternoon getting acquainted. He was very quiet and shy at first, but later on he opened up. He's a wonderful, sensitive kid who never had the breaks, and he appreciates my attention.

I've spent practically no money on him, but the time I've spent has already paid big dividends. His grades have come up amazingly, and he's changed a lot of his ideas. I think I've helped.

I wish other dads my age who were too busy for their own sons would look into "Big Brothers." It's given me a second chance at being a father. Spread the word, Abby. — FEELING GREAT

DEAR FEELING: I know the organization, and it is wonderful. Consider the word spread. (P.S. There are "Big Sisters," too.)

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a 55-year-old Mama's boy who gave his girl friend an engagement ring in 1970 but does not allow her to show it to anybody because he doesn't want his mother to find out?

Leftovers Culinary Challenge

OTTAWA (CP) — Leftover food may be a little short on reputation, say home economists at Agriculture Canada, but it is long on delicious uses.

The home economists give some tips and suggestions to help homemakers see leftovers as a culinary challenge.

The secret is to plan ahead. When planning large dinners, keep leftover uses in mind.

Refrigerate or freeze leftovers immediately to prevent spoilage and use as soon as possible.

Other tips:

— Use sauce and gravy mixes to disguise and extend leftover meat and vegetables.

— Save liquids drained from canned vegetables for soups, stews, chowders and sauces.

— Wrap leftover meats or vegetables in foil for easy reheating in the oven.

— Add a tasty topping to leftover vegetable or meat casseroles with shredded Cheddar or grated Parmesan cheese.

— Use leftover mashed potatoes for casserole toppings, fried potato patties or potato soup.

— Heat cubed potatoes, chopped onions, green pepper and celery in a small amount of salad dressing for a potato salad.

— Use a white sauce with creamed vegetables and add a glamorous topping with grated Parmesan cheese.

— Add leftover diced apples, peaches or bananas to pancake or fritter batter.

— Heat leftover canned fruit and syrup with cinnamon and nutmeg. Serve as a hot compote with a meal course.

— Make meat salads with finely chopped ham or turkey; then use as a canape spread or sandwich filling.

HAMBURGER PRICE LIKELY TO SKYROCKET

TORONTO (CP) — A marketing economist from Cornell University of Ithaca, N.Y., says the price of hamburger may skyrocket in the near future because people are eating more of it.

Max Brunk, told a recent meeting of the Ontario Cattlemen's Association that the market now is depressed but when prices for prime cuts rise, an even greater demand for hamburger will result in higher prices.

He said additional pressure has been brought against the hamburger market by fast food chains specializing in hamburgers.

The Winnipeg stockyards reported increases last week in the prices of low-grade cattle — prime sources of hamburger and beef by-products.

Fibroid Tumors Vary In Scope, Treatment

By LESTER L. COLEMAN
Are some fibroid tumors more serious than others? How can one be sure if surgery is absolutely necessary?

— Mrs. J.L.R.

Dear Mrs. R.:

Fibroid tumors of the uterus may occur singly or there may be three or four or more small ones. Their size and position in the uterus and the symptoms they produce determine the need and the kind of surgery that is necessary.

Fibroid tumors are benign, non-cancerous growths. Some are attached to the outside of the womb. Others originate in the muscle wall itself. A few are attached to the inner lining of the uterus (womb).

When fibroid tumors become large, they may be responsible for unusual or prolonged bleeding during the menstrual period, or between menstrual cycles.

In some instances, a large fibroid may press on the urinary bladder which lies in front of it. Frequency of urination becomes one of the problems.

Similarly, the large bowel or rectum lying behind the uterus, may be compressed by a large fibroid, and rectal symptoms may follow.

In rare instances, a benign fibroid tumor may become cancerous. It is for this reason that doctors keep fibroid tumors under regular observation.

When surgeons suggest an operation they appreciate the fact that patients become anxious and would welcome an additional opinion.

In this way, both the patient and the doctor become beneficiaries of that added opinion.

I'm considering the possibility of having my breasts made smaller. If I were to have another child, would it affect my ability to breastfeed the baby? — Mrs. B.P.

Dear Mrs. B.P.:

All such plastic surgery aims at retaining the normal physiological functioning of the breast. In most instances, breast feeding is not in any way affected. Yet very extensive surgery may have some adverse effect on the breastfeeding of an infant.

Before getting involved with such surgery, you should have all of these questions definitely answered by your surgeon. Only in this way can you be spared post-operative disappointment.

Matsqui Inquiry Sought

MATSQUI (CP) — Municipal council has voted to request a provincial government inquiry into a land deal in which two senior municipal staff members made a profit of $260,000.

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis said two weeks ago he would order a review of the situation if he received an official request.

Matsqui Mayor Harry Dejong said he requested the inquiry because of an apparent conflict of interest in the case. The 12-acre property, adjacent to Matsqui prison, was purchased by M.S.A. Development Ltd. in 1974, two days before a council vote approving sewers for the area raised property values.

The company, owned by municipal treasures Bruce McIntyre and public works foreman David London, was purchased for $170,000 and sold in May, 1976, for $430,000.

Moonlight Survey By Petch

A survey to determine if any University of Victoria faculty members hold outside jobs is being prepared by UVic president Howard Petch.

Petch said Tuesday he was preparing the study in response to Education Minister Pat McGee's order to B.C.'s three public universities — UVic, UBC and Simon Fraser — to notify him of all faculty members who hold money-making positions outside of their university duties.

Petch said he didn't think any of his faculty did have outside jobs now.

"There may be people who do something on weekends and don't tell us about it," Petch said. "But any time anyone takes time off from a work day, he should get clearance."

In Vancouver, Douglas Kenny, UBC president, said Tuesday he is looking "very closely" at the amount of outside work being done by Liam Finn, dean of applied sciences.

The matter was also discussed Tuesday at a closed session of the university board of governors, a university spokesman said.

"I was not aware of the magnitude of the involvement in work outside the university described in the (newspaper) articles," Kenny said in a statement issued by the university's information service.

"If the articles in the (Vancouver Sun) are factually correct, then the matter is a serious one. I am looking into it very closely," Kenny said. The university faculty association is also studying the articles.

The articles described Finn's work conducting a federal inquiry into the Burnard terminal explosion and fire for which he was paid $34,146 in fees. UBC pay sheets showed that his annual salary is $50,036 a year.

Beban Park Costs Buried — Alderman

NANAIMO — Cost overruns and a 300 per cent increase in operating expenses at Beban Park have been deliberately covered up, Ald. Nelson Allen charged Tuesday.

He said there should be a public inquiry into the Nanaimo Regional Board's handling of Beban Park, and accused fellow aldermen of "burying" problems at the complex until after the election last November. Allen was elected for the first time in that election.

Regional board chairman Paul Smith, however, dismissed Allen's charges as "rubbish" and called him irresponsible for making his criticism to the press rather than to the board.

Allen made the charges after city council received a letter from the city's recreation commission, of which Allen is a member, recommending the city not enter into a contractual agreement with the region over the Beban Park complex.

Allen said he has seen figures which show that the cost of the complex, originally set at $3.5 million, has doubled.

He also charged the board with giving the run-around to council members who tried to find out details of architects' fees and contractors' overruns in connection with the complex.

Smith said the board preferred to meet the city recreation commission rather than provide written information because of the complexities of the issue.

Ottawa-Washington Shuttle On

By FRANK RUTTER

Times Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON — Canadian cabinet ministers are popping up faster than the crows and snowdrops in Washington's late spring.

Federal government jets are running an almost continuous shuttle bringing the min-

The shuttle began when Prime Minister Trudeau held his first meetings with President Carter last week.

At least seven ministers are involved in associated or subsequent visits.

No members of the Carter cabinet have been to Ottawa.

Polysar 'Unaware' Of Foreign Rebates

OTTAWA (CP) — The president of Polysar Ltd. said Tuesday night he didn't know a foreign subsidiary was involved in questionable rebates to customers until a report of a special investigation was handed to him Jan. 31.

But Ian Rush said in testimony before the Commons public accounts committee, he had received a copy of a letter from former Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson in 1973 raising questions over the payments.

Henderson wrote his letter to Prime Minister Trudeau saying Polysar's Swiss subsidiary, Polysar International (SA PISA), was billing customers at inflated rates and remitting the difference between that and the actual price to the customer.

He said it allowed the customer to evade taxes at home and to avoid foreign exchange regulations.

Those allegations were supported in a report carried out for the company board of directors late last year after the Henderson letter was leaked to the press.

The investigation, carried out by retired Justice John Aylsworth of the Ontario Appeal Court and David C. H. Stanley, a vice-president of Wood Gundy and a director of Polysar, said the method of kickbacks also could have been used to defraud minority shareholders in the customer companies.

Huge Transport Savings If Users Pay—Basford

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The government indicated Tuesday that it wants to save hundreds of millions of dollars with its new policy of transportation facilities paying for themselves wherever possible.

Justice Minister Ron Basford, opening Commons debate on new transportation policy, said almost one-half the federal transport budget is used to pay deficits and subsidies and the cost is continually increasing.

Of the $1.6 billion in federal transportation spending last year, $448 million went to air service losses, $110.5 million to ferry subsidies; $118 million to freight subsidies, and $160 million to rail passenger service subsidies.

If the government did not call on users to pay more, there would be either a greater burden on the taxpayer or the government would have higher deficits, Basford said.

Subsidies could be unfair and discriminatory in that they favor some Canadians, encourage inefficiency and are a financial burden at a time of restraint, he added.

Conservative and NDP spokesmen rallied against politicizing of transport policy to the extent indicated in the bill which was introduced for second reading in the Commons.

Conservative Transport spokesman Jack Horner said it is ridiculous to think of spending billions of dollars developing transportation facilities when policy can be changed "by the flick of a politician's finger."

In 1966 his party had warned the government it was being unrealistic with transportation policy, and it had ended up "a mess," he said.

NDP critic Les Benjamin strongly opposed the emphasis on the "user pay" principle in the proposed legislation.

Rail transport in Canada must be operated as a public utility rather than a private business, he said, but the proposed legislation clears the way for Transport Minister Otto Lang to "foist his widely unpopular 'user-pay' policy on an unwilling public."

Horner said the bill does not call on users to pay more, there would be either a greater burden on the taxpayer or the government would have higher deficits, Basford said.

Subsidies could be unfair and discriminatory in that they favor some Canadians, encourage inefficiency and are a financial burden at a time of restraint, he added.

Opposition critics tried to detour the new transportation policy even before it got on the rails.

The charts showed that 64 per cent of the cost of highways was paid for by users; 31 per cent of the civil aviation system and 19 per cent of the marine services.

Hot on his heels came Transport Minister Otto Lang who discussed a wheat price-fixing agreement with U.S. Agriculture Agriculture Minister Bob Bergland.

On Sunday, Solicitor-General Francis Fox flew in for meetings on wiretapping and freedom of information, and to sign a prisoner-exchange treaty today with Attorney-General Griffin Bell.

As soon as Fox leaves, Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie will arrive for meetings with the head of the federal energy administration, and with Carter's energy adviser, James Schlesinger.

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of natives in federal prisons may reflect the deterioration of native culture, Robert Royer of the Native Council of Canada told a special Commons sub-committee on federal prisons Tuesday.

Royer, representing the council's Metis and non-status Indian crime and justice commission, noted that natives represent 12.5 per cent of the federal prison population although they make up less than five per cent of Canada's population.

The report was prepared by the University of Toronto's Institute for Environmental Studies for the UN Environment Program, which Tuesday launched a nine-day international conference on the "ozone problem."

Canada Launches Ozone Warning

The Canadian scientists note that the ozone layer is threatened by modern technological developments ranging from supersonic jet travel to aerosol cans that contain hair spray and deodorants.

"Human activity now poses threats to this ozone balance," according to the report.

"We are powerless to alter the incoming ultraviolet that creates the ozone, but our technology is releasing significant quantities of substances that attack it."

"Since the issues became apparent, beginning in 1970, several countries including Canada have mounted programs of research aimed at determining their importance. Results so far suggest that the dangers are real, and that drastic international action will be required."

Two-Language Airports Closer for Quebec

OTTAWA (CP) — Roger Demers is confident that supporters of two languages in Quebec airspace have victory within their grasp.

Demers, president of the Association des Gens de L'Air du Quebec, told a student group at the University of Ottawa on Tuesday that the only question remaining is when and how the use of French will be extended in aviation communications in Quebec.

Moderate English-speaking Canadians are swinging behind the official federal policy of gradually extending bilingual air traffic control in Quebec as safety permits, he said.

The Gens de L'Air president said he is certain the current federal inquiry on bilingual air traffic control will favor use of two languages in instrument flight operations in Quebec. Instrument flight rules apply generally to commercial airliners.

Demers said testimony before the federal air inquiry in Montreal by transport department "officials" has been strongly favorable to spreading the use of French to the three busy Montreal airports for visual flight operations applying generally to smaller aircraft.

Bilingual air traffic control for visual flight operations already applies to seven of the 10 major Quebec airports.

While he told the university students he would be willing to accept the findings of the federal air inquiry, he qualified this statement later to reporters.

He said he is certain the inquiry would be favorable to his point of view, but if it was not, he said he was not prepared to commit himself high to accepting the findings.

The Gens de L'Air has so far refused to take part in the inquiry commission hearings and the transport department technical tests on air traffic control simulation equipment in nearby Hull, Que.

The Quebec aviation group, which represents many French-speaking pilots and air traffic controllers, has demanded that the transport department meet certain conditions before it takes part in the simulation tests.

These conditions included introduction of French for visual flight operations at the Montreal airports of St. Hubert and Mirabel.

MODEL QUEBEC ON HONG KONG

MONTREAL (CP) — An independent Quebec would have to adopt a free trade policy similar to Hong Kong's to survive economically, says a visiting United States economist.

Professor James McGill Buchanan, of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, said in an interview published Tuesday that Quebec could not survive without adopting a free-trade policy.

"There would be some relocation required on a short-term basis, but in the long term it would be very advantageous for Canada."

Although he does not believe separation will occur,

Buchanan said the Quebec independence movement "will probably mean less control over the country by the federal government, and this is all to the good."

Even if Quebec does not separate, he said, Canada should consider adopting a free-trade policy.

Opposition MPs Press For Job-Creating Budget

CRIME BAGMAN
OWES $1M
TO TAXMAN

MONTREAL (CP) — William Obront, the imprisoned former meat vendor and alleged underworld financer, owes Quebec more than $1 million in unpaid back taxes, it was revealed Tuesday at the Quebec police commission inquiry into organized crime.

An investigator with the provincial revenue department's organized crime section told the inquiry Obront owed $1,058,000 in back taxes, including interest and tax penalties, covering an eight-year period.

The investigator, Roger Delage, appeared at the inquiry over objections by the Quebec government since section 69 of the Revenue Act holds that tax information is "strictly confidential."

The government has said there will be a new budget sometime before June.

Sinclair Stevens (PC—Yorksmead) pointed to figures released Monday by Statistics Canada showing a decline in economic activity in the final three months of 1976. He wanted to know why inflation was at 9.4 per cent according to the federal agency when the economy was declining.

Trudeau questioned the inflation rate figure, saying that, according to the anti-inflation board, inflation last year was about six per cent.

The Anti-Inflation Board uses the consumer price index, which measures price changes in a basket of popularly used consumer items, to measure inflation. The price change indicator used in calculating gross national product by Statistics Canada is broader, and covers consumer items, government spending, inventory investments and exports and imports.

Trudeau steadily resisted efforts by opposition members to find out how soon a budget will be introduced.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

It is an obvious fact that one cannot be a consistent winner in a rubber-bridge game unless he holds a reasonable share of the aces, kings, queens and jacks that are floating around on each deal. Nevertheless, many days arise when one does not hold his fair share of high cards, and yet can emerge victorious because of his proper utilization of low cards.

In today's deal South arrived at an 11-trick contract with but 18 high-card points. But, by correct management of his low cards, he fulfilled the contract.

Opening lead: King of ♦.

Against South's five-heart contract West opened the king of clubs, East playing the nine. Next came the club ace, East dropping the five. A third club lead was ruffed with South's five of trumps.

South now led his singleton diamond to dummy's ace, after which a diamond was ruffed with South's queen of trumps. The king of trumps was then led and overtaken with the board's ace. A third diamond lead was ruffed with declarer's seven of trumps. Then followed the nine of trumps to dummy's ten-spot, and a fourth diamond lead was ruffed with declarer's jack. Dummy's remaining diamond had just become the sole surviving diamond in the deck.

Declarer next led his carefully preserved deuce of trumps to the board's three-spot. On the established ten of diamonds he then discarded his losing ten of spades. The rest of the tricks belonged to him.

Had declarer gotten careless by ruffing either the third club lead or any of the three diamond leads with the two of trumps (or had he led the deuce in order to get to dummy for the ruffing of the diamonds), he would have gone down. Had he not saved the two of trumps, he would not have been able to utilize dummy's three of hearts as an entry for the cashing of the board's established fifth diamond.

Thus, by careful management — looking ahead to see what was going to develop in the later stages of play — declarer brought home a contract that a less-skilled player might well have lost.

BRAZIL RIDING HIGH

United Press International

The president of the Brazilian Coffee Institute said Tuesday his country's strategy will be to ride high in rampaging prices, selling all the coffee it can and withholding stocks from the market only if prices go down.

"There are people recommending that we now pull out of the foreign market to force new highs," said Camilo Calazans in an interview with the newspaper Jornal do Brasil.

"But putting a stop to sales eventually would reduce prices by increasing the nation's coffee stocks. The more we sell, the more the price should go up, and while selling, we will not be accused of manipulation."

But he added: "If the quotations fall, then we pull the Brazilian coffee from the market."

Four Lawyers Push Legal Pot

OTTAWA (CP) — Four lawyers, who say they are tired of watching people go to jail for possession of marijuana, have formed a national organization intending to push the government into fulfilling a promise made five years ago to lighten penalties for marijuana possession.

The group, which plans to open its first office in Vancouver this week, is the first to receive a foreign charter from NORML, the U.S. National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws, which is credited with having marijuana offences removed from the laws of six states.

"We want to end all criminal penalties for possession and use of marijuana," lawyer Ted Siefred explained in a recent interview. "We don't advocate the use of marijuana but can find no medical, moral or legal justification for imprisoning those who do use it."

Siefred said the country probably isn't ready to have the sale or distribution of marijuana made legal. But, he said, most believe people convicted of possessing the drug should not receive punishment more severe than a fine.

NORML Canada estimates 2,000,000 Canadians, including 43 per cent of all college students, have smoked marijuana.

Siefred, John Conroy and Roger Jatko, all Vancouver lawyers, and Toronto lawyer Clayton Ruby make up NORML Canada's board of directors.

"We have practiced criminal law for the last six years and I'm tired of sitting back and watching people go to jail for something like possession of marijuana," Siefred said.

NORML Canada's policy statement says the organization "fully supports a decriminalization policy towards the recreational use of all drugs, including alcohol, tobacco and marijuana."

Justice Minister Ron Basford said that legislation would be introduced soon to lighten penalties for marijuana possession.

NORML Canada also strongly discourages driving cars or other vehicles while under the influence of marijuana or any other drug and recognizes the legitimate public interest in prohibiting it.

Siefred said that since the government promised to lighten penalties for possession of the drug five years ago, nearly 100,000 Canadians have been convicted of the offence under the Narcotic Control Act.

Between 1973 and 1975 alone nearly 3,000 people—most between the ages of 18 and 29—were put in prison for possession of either marijuana or hashish.

Siefred said he was skeptical of recent promises by

B.C. MPs Press for Rigid Pipe Inquiry

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Fitness and Recreation Minister Iona Campagnola said Tuesday she expects a Berger-type inquiry will be set up to study the proposed marine route of a Kitimat-Edmonton pipeline.

She said in an interview from Ottawa that the B.C. members of the federal cabinet will meet tonight to prepare a case for a public inquiry.

Announcement of a commissioner's appointment would be made later this week, she said.

In a telegram sent to the Kitimat Oil Coalition, Campagnola said she has been assured public hearings will be held and she is pressing for enactment of a part of the Federal Inquiries Act.

This is a more rigid and powerful procedure than the proposed independent inquiry announced last week by Federal Fisheries and Environment Minister Romeo LeBlanc.

Under Part 1, Campagnola said, the commissioner is empowered to allow adversary funding and to hire research and preparation staff.

In Victoria, a Bluepeace spokesman claimed that Canadian port was chosen by American companies as a pipeline terminus for Alaskan oil because Canadians would raise fewer objections than Americans.

University of Victoria geography professor Dr. William M. Ross told 300 people at the Newcombe auditorium that Kitimat was selected as a port for crude oil tankers because Canadian laws for oil shippers are less stringent and environmental groups less vocal than their

Ranch Mortgage Called

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A B.C. Supreme Court judge Tuesday ordered the foreclosure of the mortgage on the historic Empire valley ranch which was purchased in 1974 by Sophie Stegemann.

Mr. Justice Pat Dohm made the decision after Stegemann had failed Monday to pay $89,059 as a condition for a minimum six-month delay on the foreclosure order.

On Feb. 4, Mr. Justice Dohm had given her an extension to Feb. 28 after Stegemann repeatedly failed to make mortgage payments to the previous owner of the ranch, Robert Maytag.

The ranch is about 100 miles northwest of here.

Neither Stegemann nor her lawyer would comment on the decision.

Derek Donaldson, counsel for Maytag, said "Stegemann made a lot of effort to collect the money by Monday but was unable to do so."

Tuesday's decision "gives Stegemann 30 days before she is required to vacate the ranch, Donaldson added, adding that Maytag will take over the premises as soon as possible after that time.

Stegemann, a widow, bought the ranch for $1.6 million shortly after immigrating to Canada from West Germany in 1974.

The price included a down payment of $650,000 and first and second mortgages of $320,000 and $670,000.

She had made payments of $21,000 and $29,000 before Maytag took the case to court. The amount required to bring Stegemann's mortgage payments up to date would have been about $490,000.

Profits Too Low — Dealer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Investment dealer Michael Ryan says profits for companies in Canada are too low in relation to the capital tied up in business.

"In many industries we have passed that critical point where profits have become so low that managements have finally realized they cannot afford to modernize or expand," Ryan told a service club luncheon Tuesday.

Ryan, a vice-president of Pemberton Securities Ltd., said the problem is especially severe in B.C. where jobs are being lost because companies are not expanding and are losing out competitively to similar firms in the United States Pacific northwest.

Profits cannot increase without three things happening, Ryan said in his address.

"The political climate must change, because in quite a few industries profits are held down indirectly by political interference, or directly by such disastrous programs as the Anti-Inflation Board.

American counterparts. Bluepeace is a volunteer group founded in January to oppose Kitimat as an oil-pipeline port terminus and to press for high standards of safety for marine tanker traffic along the B.C. coast.

Spokesman Mrs. Ginny Gareau said people are being urged to pressure their members of Parliament for positive legislation to control oil shipping.

Ross said the federal government has done nothing about west coast oil tanker traffic even though the decision to use tankers along the B.C. coastline was made in 1971.

Gareau said the reasons given for selecting Kitimat, a

Other speakers included David Anderson, who is opposing Kitimat as an oil-pipeline terminus at the request of the provincial Ecological Reserves Program.

UNION AT BANK?

VANCOUVER (CP) — A bank employees' union has applied for certification for 85 employees at the Bank of Nova Scotia's data centre in Vancouver.

Spokesman Patricia Meaney told a news conference that the United Bank Workers, Local 2 of the Service, Office and Retail Workers' Union of Canada, applied Monday to the Canada Labor Relations Board.

"Those of us in the data centre have taken this major step for several reasons," said Meaney. "We are some of the lowest-paid workers in this country though we work for some of the largest and most profitable employers."

QUEEN CHARLOTTES FERRY NO MORE

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Malibu Princess has returned to Vancouver after making her last empty run between Prince Rupert and Masset in the Queen Charlotte Islands. Martin Holt, Prince Rupert operations manager for Rivtow Straits Ltd. said Monday the ferry carried two flying passengers to the Queen Charlottes during the three-month period ending Feb. 24, the date of her final trek across Heceta Strait.

The 125-foot ferry, which docked in Vancouver Friday, also filled in for part of the Bella Bella's northern coastal schedule when engine trouble put the 85-foot launch out of service for about a month.

Holt said the Malibu Princess carried about a dozen passengers on its weekly runs to Port Simpson and Kinoosuit and one boatload of school children.

government withdrew the company's subsidy last year.

The federal government has offered island residents a $5 rebate on air fare between Masset and Prince Rupert, instead of the Malibu Princess.

Fatal Air Crash
Mystery Says Jury

TERRACE (CP) — The cause of an air crash Jan. 14 that killed 12 persons, remained unknown at the conclusion of a five-hour coroner's inquest Tuesday, but the jury made four recommendations.

After deliberating for 40 minutes the jury recommended that search and rescue facilities on the West Coast be improved, including licensing of air-sea helicopter pilots to be allowed to fly at night. The jury had been told an air-sea rescue helicopter at Prince Rupert, was unable to assist on the night of the crash because the pilot lacked a licence to fly at night.

The jury also recommended a review of emergency procedures at Terrace airport; implementation of full instrument landing service facilities at the airport, and erection of a fan marker on Little Herman Mountain as an extra aid for pilots.

A transport ministry spokesman told the inquest the ministry hoped to have its investigation of the crash completed in two to three months.

A twin-engined plane, owned by Northern Thunderbird Air Ltd. of Prince George, was a regularly scheduled return flight to Prince George, from Prince Rupert when it crashed into Little Herman Mountain, two miles south of Terrace airport.

The plane had bypassed Terrace on its flight to Prince Rupert but was making a landing on its return path. Radio contact between the Terrace airport and the plane was lost at about 5:30 p.m. local time as it approached the airport.

Al McLarty, a Prince Rupert radio operator, said his weather teletype machine was not functioning the day of the crash. He said he told the Northern Thunderbird pilot and co-pilot about weather reports in the Terrace and Prince Rupert areas shortly before the plane left for Terrace.

A Terrace weather forecaster testified that at 5 p.m. the cloud cover was 1,200 feet and obscured by snow. The possibility of freezing rain also had been forecast.

The inquest was told that visibility was 1/4 miles short of the two-mile visibility needed for a landing and that a CP Air jet had bypassed a landing at Terrace because of poor visibility about an hour before the Twin Otter crashed.

A search involving Okanagan Helicopters, air search and rescue, Canadian Forces Comox and a ground party located the wreckage about 9:30 p.m. Two doctors from Terrace, Canadian Forces paramedics and RCMP checked the downed plane and determined there were no survivors.

The hill where the crash occurred is well-marked under normal conditions by a red flashing light at its crest.

Interior
Egg Farmers
Quitting

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Egg producers Arnold Link and Savo Kovachich of Prince George will be out of business in four months, says manager Al Yablonski of the B.C. Egg Marketing Board.

The producers appeared Monday in Abbotsford at a licensing hearing before the board.

Link told the board that he and Kovachich were agreeable to sign the application for licences, but did not want the move considered an acceptance of the board's policies.

Yablonski said Tuesday in a telephone interview from Abbotsford that the two producers will complete and return their applications by March 31, adding that he expects both to be out of business in four months.

He said there was no question of the board granting them licences to produce because they are complying with all-board regulations, including inspection of facilities.

These two producers had earlier refused to sign applications for operating licences because they object to board policy that gives inspectors access to their property.

They have also battled with the board for several years over quotas which they said favor Lower Mainland producers.

Kovachich said that he and Link are considering going out of business, but he would have to discuss the matter with Link before commenting further.

Region to Appeal
Zoning Law Upset

DUNCAN — A B.C. Su-

quashed the Cobble Hill zoning bylaw will be appealed, the Cowichan Valley Region

Board has decided.

Lawyers working for the board were directed Tuesday to file the appeal after a special meeting Monday.

nessmen critical of the lack

quashed by Mr. Justice Davis

Fulton on the grounds that insufficient notice had been

the bylaw.

Mr. Justice Fulton said the

Cowichan Valley News, in which the notice of meeting had been published, was not a newspaper under the meaning of the act, because it was not sold to the public and did not have a regular subscribers' list.

The region's planning committee chairman, Ken Douglas of Youbou, said the decision to appeal will allow the board time to introduce a new

commercial and light industrial zoning.

FARMER DELL'S JOYFUL FARM

Singing a happy song beneath the old oak tree pays off for tenor Richard Margison when two young ladies — Lori Hallier, left, and Janet Christiansen — are drawn to his side. Award winning singer Margison and the girls are part of the cast of James Reaney's Names and Nicknames, a play that combines music and children's games in a story about life on Farmer Dell's farm. The actors portray not only the children, but the animals, milking machines, fence posts and even the stars above. A presentation of Four Seasons Musical Theatre, it will open Saturday at 2 p.m. at Sir James Douglas School, and will be repeated the following four Saturdays at various schools. ## Doctor Loses Lawsuit For Causing Abortion EDMONTON (CP) — A district court judge awarded Frances Cryderman $5,320 in damages Tuesday following a trial involving a lawsuit against Dr. C. A. Douglas Ringrose of Edmonton.

In a written judgment, Judge William Stevenson said Mrs. Cryderman's experience with the gynecologist caused her "a great deal of emotional stress and strain as well as unnecessary pain and incapacity."

The 36-year-old mother of two claimed that without her consent, or knowledge, Ringrose performed a surgical operation which brought about an abortion.

Judge Stevenson said he could not find, on the evidence, that the woman underwent an abortion in Ringrose's office, but the silver nitrate applications she received, he added, "would be almost certain to produce an abortion."

Ringrose "fell short" in his job of informing the woman of the uncertainties of silver nitrate sterilization procedures, the judge ruled.

He had no doubt Ringrose was experimenting by using the procedures and therefore should have alerted Mrs. Cryderman the treatments were no guarantee of sterility.

She was thoroughly unprepared for the pregnancy when it did come," said Judge Stevenson, "for she then learned for the first time the process was experimental."

"The consequences of the defendant's failure is that the plaintiff found herself with an unwanted, unexpected pregnancy developing in her uterus which had been subjected to treatment by a corrosive substance."

Mrs. Cryderman became afraid of the side effects from an unknown procedure such as the silver nitrate applications, had a therapeutic abortion by hysterectomy, and was subsequently sterilized.

"Fortunately, there is no permanent harm," said the judge. "She now is sterile but that is a condition which she wished to achieve."

Judge Stevenson said the silver nitrate sterilization procedure was experimental in the sense that it was not generally accepted.

"It was novel and its efficiency and reliability had not been demonstrated to the satisfaction of the profession."

Bank Fined For False Ad

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce was fined $300 Tuesday in provincial judges court for advertising a service for senior citizens last year that it could not deliver.

The bank, in a national advertising campaign, offered senior citizens who opened special accounts a number of benefits, including the ability to pay their utility bills at bank branches.

But David Frayer, regional director of the federal justice department, said customers who tried to exercise that privilege in Winnipeg found the tellers refused to handle utility payments.

Frayer cited three-quarter page advertisements in Jan. 1976 editions of both Winnipeg daily newspapers, offering the service to senior citizens at no extra charge.

He said later that month, the bank ran corrected advertisements, which included the phrase, "bills normally paid at the Commerce." He said the corrected advertisements did not, however, include an apology and did not point out the error in the earlier advertisements.

Ted Glawacki, a bank representative, said utility bills could be paid at all Bank of Commerce branches throughout Canada except for Manitoba, Saskatchewan and part of British Columbia.

"There was no intention to mislead the pensioners," he told the court.

Glawacki said the advertising campaign planners did not have all the facts when the first advertisements were placed, but corrections were made when the error was brought to their attention.

Judge R. L. Kopstein said the only issue was the inconvenience to those who tried to avail themselves of the free bill-paying service. He said when a company as large as the Bank of Commerce offered a service, it should deliver.

A bank official said the situation has been corrected and provincial utility bills now may be paid at the bank's branches throughout Manitoba.

4 Children Die in Crash

POR MORESBY (Reuters) — Five persons, four of them children, were killed Tuesday when a light aircraft crashed into a village school in Papua New Guinea's East Sepik province, a civil aviation spokesman said Wednesday. Four other children were badly burned in a fire which followed the crash. The nine passengers and pilot of the plane, a twin-engined Cessna, escaped without serious injury.

Brazil Points the Direction In Grow-Your-Own Fuels

Manchester Guardian

Brazil is setting the world an example on how to solve the problem of what to do when the oil runs out.

The answer is to grow fuel. By 1985, Brazil plans to be producing 20 per cent of her requirements of motor fuels such as ethanol by perhentiation from sugar cane and the root crop manioc from which tapioca is derived.

With an initial investment of about $34 million, the program of expanding crop areas and building distilleries is progressing so fast that even allowing for technical problems, it seems probable Brazil will be producing enough fuel to replace all imported oil before the end of the century.

At a symposium organized by Brazil's ministry of industry and commerce, the government released figures indicating that less than two per cent of the country's land area would be needed to produce fuel equivalent to the present consumption — which includes imports that cost about $2.5 billion a year.

With proposals for about 70 new industrial alcohol distilleries already in the pipeline and the backing of a major advance in enzyme technology that will enable starch-rich crops to be used as a feedstock as well as sugarcane, the Brazilian grand design is being led personally by Gen. Ernesto Geisel, the Brazilian president.

Demonstration vehicles modified to run on hydrated alcohol (95 per cent ethanol; 5 per cent on a propaganda tour cent water) are touring the designed, to prove not only that the mixture is as effective as petrol but that it is also considerably less polluting.

The Brazilian research program mounted in 1975 as a trouble-shooting exercise for ethanol conversion has made some unexpected discoveries.

It has been found possible to run Standard diesel engines in buses and trucks on a 50-50 ethanol-diesel oil mixture, and alcohol is a suitable fuel for turbines. With the Brazilian department of industry and commerce said to be looking also at the possibility of producing the broader spectrum hydrocarbons from euphorbia shrubs — a proposal also being looked at seriously in the United States — and at the extreme high quality lubricating oil that can be produced in bulk by cultivating the jojoba shrub, the future for Rio looks far from oil-less. The question, not yet answered by the Brazilian government, is how to prevent drivers from drinking their fuel.

Because agricultural labor in Brazil is not only plentiful but cheap, ethanol production is also cheap. The present plan under government price-fixing allows ethanol to reach the market at about $1.02 a gallon compared with $1.53 for petrol. The distilleries appear able to operate profitably under those conditions.

U.K. Cool On Aid To Leyland

LONDON (Reuter) — Prime Minister James Callaghan said Tuesday the British government will have to think again before pouring any more state rescue funds into the strike-ravaged Leyland Motor Corp.

Callaghan sounded a warning in Parliament as the paralysis at Leyland spread across the company, which produces one in every four cars sold in Britain.

By Tuesday, only five of Leyland's 18 production lines were still working. Latest casualties of the stoppage, begun last week by 3,000 toolmakers, were the lines producing Mini, Maxi and Princess cars.

The toolmakers fashion the machinery used to make cars. Company sources feared that the dispute might make idle Leyland's entire 120,000-strong workforce by the end of the week.

For the government the affair posed an acute dilemma.

When the government's National Enterprise Board (NEB) took over the failing Leyland organization two years ago, it promised investments totalling about $1.7 billion to help the company win back ground lost to foreign competition.

But it was made plain that the money would be doled out in instalments — and that continued funding would depend on good industrial behavior. The NEB said it did not want to pour funds into an enterprise torn by continual strikes.

Leyland desperately needed state cash to build new models which it hoped could beat back foreign competition.

and, with considerable cost reduction possible through future mechanization of planting and cropping, the market price of ethanol seems likely to fall steadily in relation to petroleum products.

The Brazilian government sees enormous benefits accruing over the next two decades. The plan will create about 1 million new jobs, mainly agricultural, divert a substantial amount of revenue from imports to the stimulating of internal markets, and provide the basis on which a new technology — a chemical industry based on ethanol rather than oil — will arise and in turn reap large rewards.

The great thing about the agricultural production of feedstocks, says the Brazilian government, is that with good management it will last forever, and the country will be in command of her own energy destiny.

No Army Draft Seen by Carter

WASHINGTON (WP) — President Jimmy Carter said Tuesday that he has no intention "at present" of seeking a reinstatement of the military draft but will not hesitate to do so if necessary to maintain the nation's military manpower strength.

Speaking to hundreds of military and civilian employees at the defence department, the president said he is concerned with the "weakness" in military recruiting, particularly for reserve forces.

Dam Appeal Secret

The cabinet committee set up to hear appeals regarding the construction of the proposed Revelstoke Dam will hold its hearings in secret, Labor Minister Allan Williams said Tuesday.

Williams, chairman of the committee, told the legislature during question period that neither the news media nor unorganized groups will be able to attend the hearings.

The environment ministry announced last week that the committee had been appointed to hear the appeal of four organizations protesting the granting of a water rights licence to build the dam.

The announcement was confirmed by cabinet order on Monday, when the first closed meeting was held.

Bill King (NDP-Revelstoke-Slocan) told reporters he was shocked and appalled that the hearings are going to be held behind closed doors.

He said it is a dangerous precedent and "flies in the face of natural justice."

King told the legislature that such an appeal hearing could be held either through the B.C. Supreme Court or through cabinet committee, and that both are usually open to the public.

However, Williams said King is wrong, adding that legislation says a court appeal can only take place when a water rights cancellation is being appealed, not a water rights confirmation.

Small Surplus Predicted

By LIZ HUGHES

Times Staff

The provincial government is still predicting it will end the fiscal year March 31 with a small budgetary surplus, the third quarterly financial report, released Tuesday reveals.

The report, designed to be a sort of state-of-the-province message, was distributed with none of the fanfare which accompanied the first two quarterly reports.

The province has a budgetary surplus of $34.7 million for the first nine months of the fiscal year, from April to December, 1976, but says that surplus will be considerably reduced by the end of the fiscal year. The original budget had forecast a deficit of $25.6 million for the first nine months.

Many of the figures were contained in the B.C. comptroller-general's report released with the budget in January.

Predictions on the year-end state of the province's financial health have ranged through the first quarter report which set out the possibility of a deficit, through the second report which predicted either a break-even year or a "modest" surplus, to the third report which seems confident of at least a small surplus.

Both revenues and expenditures came in under the original budget forecast for the third quarter, revenues by $7.5 million and expenditures by $6.3 million.

The biggest saving in government expenditure came from the ministry of human resources which shows a budget.

GOV'T COUNTS 8,117 NABOBS

OTTAWA (CP) — A total of 8,117 persons had total taxable incomes exceeding $100,000 during 1974, according to figures released in the Commons Tuesday.

Ontario leads in the high income sweepstakes, with 48 residents for every 100,000 reporting incomes of $100,000 or more.

Alberta follows with 35 residents out of every 100,000 followed by B.C. with 24 residents out of every 100,000 and Quebec with 31 per 100,000.

The Canadian average is 35 per 100,000 of the population.

A written response to a question by Liberal MP Harold Herbert (Montreal Vaudreuil) showed half of the wealthy 4,080, lived in Ontario. By comparison a total of 1,968 Quebec residents reported total incomes of more than $100,000.

Other provinces have fewer residents in the high-income range: British Columbia, 850; Alberta, 549; Saskatchewan, 200; Manitoba, 138; Nova Scotia, 113; New Brunswick and Newfoundland, 33 each. No figures were provided for Prince Edward Island and the two northern territories because of the small number of rich residents and the need to maintain secrecy about their tax returns.

Youth Dies In Smash

A 17-year-old youth was killed early this morning when the car in which he was riding struck a power pole in the 300-block Esquimalt Road.

Michael Wade Gus, 880 Vernon, was the eighth traffic fatality in Greater Victoria this year.

Esquimalt police have not yet released the name of a second person in the car. He suffered minor injuries and was treated and released from hospital.

The 1965 blue Chevrolet was westbound on Esquimalt just after 1:15 a.m. when it went out of control and struck the pole in front of the Cordon Blue restaurant at 820 Esquimalt.

Anyone who saw the vehicle prior to the accident is asked to call the Esquimalt police station.

TV Border War Truce Declared

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Canada appears to have abandoned a controversial broadcast policy and seeks a permanent truce in the so-called television border war.

This was strongly hinted by External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson at a previously-uncanceled meeting here last week with 24 American journalists.

Jamieson was asked about the suspension of Canada's policy to delete commercials from U.S. programs carried on midband and cable systems, a policy described by U.S. broadcasters as "piracy."

"I hope that what we have done already will be adequate," Jamieson said.

"So the suspension will continue?" he was asked.

"Yes," he replied.

"We don't want to be punitive just simply for its own sake," Jamieson said.

A U.S. official said the Americans would be "delighted" if the commercial deletion policy is abandoned, because up to now Canada has said only that it will suspend it pending discussion of alternatives. In fact there are no alternatives under discussion. The U.S. considers Canada has done enough damage by eliminating tax concessions to advertisers on border stations.

Cablevision companies in Canada were also pleased with the change in the policy which would have required all U.S. commercials to be blanked out and replaced by public service announcements or Canadian commercials.

"This would have created a very complicated situation," Victoria cablevision general manager Len Charlish said.

"We would have been prepared to do it, if the policy had been implemented, but it is a relief to see it apparently will not go ahead."

The policy was implemented by Canada in Ontario and then immediately suspended when U.S. stations accused Canadian cablevision companies of "piracy."

Charish said the Ottawa decision would have no economic impact on the local cable TV station.

"We will continue to operate as we have in the past."

A similar policy invoked by Ottawa, of requiring cable stations to switch to a Canadian channel when the same program is running on a U.S. and Canadian station, will continue, however.

HERRING SPELL paychecks to employees of Victoria-based Oakland Industries Ltd. fish processing plant. Company employee Lynn Youlden displays two fish from first catch to go through plant since it reopened after solving financial problems that threatened to shut down operation. Firm will operate throughout current herring season and its hope permanent solution will be found to keep its 300 employees on payroll. (Bill Halkett photo).

U.S. SUSPECTS GM CHEATED ON TAXES

NEW YORK (AP) — Federal officials suspect General Motors Corp. has purposefully understated its income and taxes over the last few years, possibly cheating the government out of hundreds of millions of dollars, according to the Wall Street Journal.

The Journal, in a story from Detroit, says investigators believe GM understated its income by writing off almost $500 million worth of parts and equipment that either did not exist or had been written off before.

GM, the biggest auto-maker in the U.S. and one of the country's largest taxpayers, denies wrongdoing, and no official charges have been filed, the newspaper said.

There are no assurances charges will ever be filed. The Journal says, although the Justice Department and the Internal Revenue Service are pressing ahead with a major investigation of GM's financials.

The write-off practice is not illegal and is used routinely, the newspaper says, to cover old, obsolete and useless items.

However, government officials believe that some of the items that were being written off had already been written off fully before or that some of the items may not exist.

CONVICT SWAP TREATY SIGNED

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canada and the United States announced today the signing of a prisoner-exchange treaty that also covers persons on probation or parole.

Under terms of the treaty signed here by Canadian Solicitor-General Francis Fox and U.S. Attorney-General Griffin Bell — Canadians in U.S. prisons or on probation or parole from U.S. prisons may be transferred to Canada. U.S. nationals in Canada would have matching rights.

Fox said in a statement that the treaty, similar to an earlier Mexico-U.S. agreement, will serve as a prototype for Canada in negotiating similar arrangements with other countries.

The release said there are 242 Canadians in foreign prisons and 587 aliens in Canadian prisons. U.S. prisons hold 90 Canadians and 174 U.S. citizens are in Canadian prisons.

The statement added that before the treaty can be brought into force legislative changes must be approved by Parliament and provincial authorities will be consulted on the legislation.

The treaty provides that no individual will be transferred until all rights of appeal in the sentencing state have been exhausted. The transfer would be subject to the approval of each country and would not be initiated without the consent of the individual concerned.

TV 'Doctoring' of Ads Rapped

In the interview format, the views expressed would have to be a fair sampling of the opinions expressed by the persons approached.

If the results of a survey were referred to in a commercial, the questionnaire on which the survey was based would have to be unbiased "so as to truly reflect the consumer views."

If a well-known personality were to imply in a commercial that he is doing a product or service that is of concern about deteriorating standards in an industry, it could be considered misleading if he used it only occasionally or only once or twice, the bulletin said.

Anyone making an endorsement of a product should also disclose any financial connections with the firm that sells it, the bulletin said.

The fact the person was being paid to make the endorsement should also be stated if the commercial in any way implies he is doing it for professional reasons only or, for example, out of concern about deteriorating standards in an industry.

Clerks Parlay Consolation Into Million-Dollar Jackpot

VANCOUVER (CP) — Five Vancouver supermarket clerks parlayed a $250 Provincial lottery consolation prize into a $1 million jackpot Monday night.

The five, all employed by Canada Safeway Ltd., shared ticket number 4650415, one of the five ticket numbers worth $1 million in the Provincial lottery draw, televised nationally from Winnipeg Monday night.

Lottery officials identified the five as David Heard, Leo Lepore, Tim Bullinger, Paul Spellman and Richard Unrau.

"I didn't sleep a wink all night but I managed to make it into work," Bullinger said in an interview Tuesday at the supermarket where he works.

Bullinger, a 21-year-old bachelor, said the clerks won $250 after buying 32 tickets on a previous draw. They decided to reinvest the prize in tickets for Monday's draw. They also chipped in periodically and were holding 71 tickets by draw time.

The clerks were the only major prizewinners in B.C. who had checked in with lottery officials by late Tuesday.

"All five of us got together to have a little party and watch the draw on TV," said Bullinger. "We figured we'd have a few close numbers, maybe pick up a couple of consolation prizes, but we were nowhere near on 70 tickets. We were getting a little down."

"But then along came the T1st ticket. Wow! It didn't matter — we hit the big one. Leo was the first to notice. He shouted, 'We won.' It took the rest of us a couple of seconds to realize he was right, and then there was a lot of shouting and hollering going on."

The five, all in their 20s, will each take $200,000.

Bullinger said it takes nearly two years and costs the taxpayer "a fortune" to train young lawyers training to be prosecutors paid about $1,300 a month, but the government recently began hiring outside lawyers at up to $6,000 a month to help clear a backlog of court cases.

McKinnon said one young prosecutor had resigned, landed an ad hoc job, and returned to work at a much higher rate of pay. He said that eight of 37 prosecutors who have resigned since April 1974, have returned on the ad hoc program.

Forced Move Protest

University of Victoria vice-president Dr. George Pedersen says the resignation of top-rated violinist Gerald Stanick shows discrimination by the Ottawa-based Canada Council against UVic.

Stanick has been told he has to move to the University of Western Ontario or lose his Canada Council support.

Stanick, rated as one of North America's top violinists, submitted his resignation to UVic effective July 1.

He has been head of the string section in the music department for three years.

Stanick said he is leaving because of his commitment to Quartet Canada — a highly rated string ensemble whose other three members live in the east.

The quartet has Canada Council support.

The council now wants all four musicians on one campus — the University of Western Ontario.

Pedersen said he has instructed Dr. Peter Smith, Dean of Fine Arts, to write to Hugh Davidson, head of the council's music division, to get an explanation for the council's action.

He called the move "totally unmerited interference" and said he is incensed.

A committee of five municipal engineers has unanimously opposed a proposal to shift a controversial sewage pumping station to Trial Island off Oak Bay.

The pumping station, part of a $12 million sewage disposal project, had been proposed for Shoal Bay but that location has been vigorously opposed by neighbors.

Today a regional public works committee was told that engineering consultants now believe an even better site for the big pumping station would be the shoreline home of Colonist publisher Richard Bower, also on Shoal Bay.

If Bowers' property was finally selected as the station site it would have to be expropriated.

Regional director Ron McKenzie said that news has "political overtones".

Bowers has been one of the most vocal opponents of the Shoal Bay site and McKenzie said locating a pumping station on Bowers' property would be seen as "an attempt to buy off the person who has been the main objector."

Regional Board chairman Jim Campbell, who had just explained that the Bowers site had been mentioned for the first time by engineers last week, said he objected to McKenzie's remarks.

Consulting engineers will examine a total of four sites, including Bowers' property, and report on the merits of each as a location for the pumping station.

The Bullock report had suggested such a move could save between $1.5 and $2 million.

But the municipal engineers, challenging almost every aspect of the Bullock report, said what it proposed would cost about $2 million more to build.

The regional committee endorsed the municipal engineers' recommendations that the sewage disposal system, which includes a long outfall at Clover Point, be continued — and that a suitable site for the controversial pumping station be found as soon as possible.

Jury Still In Huddle

The assize jury in a B.C. Supreme Court murder trial spent the night in a hotel after failing to reach a verdict following more than five hours deliberation Tuesday.

The jury returned to its deliberations this morning in the case of John Edward Aitken, 30, accused of first-degree murder by causing the death of Alice Monique Dhillon, 30, while committing rape.

Her beaten and strangled body was found Sept. 9 on a grassy slope between Anson Crescent and the beach at Macaulay Point in Esquimalt. The jury returned three times to the courtroom after retiring.

The first two times, testimony was read back from two witnesses, Jeannette Parsons and Anne Marie Charek, waitresses at the Halfway House beer parlor on Esquimalt.

Later, the jury asked Mr. Justice McKay to hear again his statement on the law, and he covered reasonable doubt, direct and circumstantial evidence, the alternative verdicts and the ingredients in each.

Verdicts open to the jury were first-degree murder, second-degree murder, manslaughter and not guilty.

The jury returned three times to the courtroom after retiring.

The first two times, testimony was read back from two witnesses, Jeannette Parsons and Anne Marie Charek, waitresses at the Halfway House beer parlor on Esquimalt.

Later, the jury asked Mr. Justice McKay to hear again his statement on the law, and he covered reasonable doubt, direct and circumstantial evidence, the alternative verdicts and the ingredients in each.

Verdicts open to the jury were first-degree murder, second-degree murder, manslaughter and not guilty.

Some Hints from Beaver

1. These shingles should be used on roofs with a 4 in 12 slope or steeper.

2. If you are storing shingles, avoid stacking them in piles more than 3 ft. high and do not leave them in the heat of the sun.

3. There is no need to remove old shingles or roll roofing before applying your new shingles. Your structure can support the additional weight.

4. Cut away all loose, curled or lifted shingles before starting your new roof. Remove protruding nails and sweep roof clean.

5. Use galvanized roofing nails, 10 to 12 gauge with at least a 7/8" head. 1 1/2" length is suitable. Allow 2 1/2 lbs. per square.

6. Slight variations in the dimensions are unavoidable, so sufficient chalk lines should be struck to ensure accurate alignment.

7. Shingles sometimes vary, so avoid mixing lot numbers on one roof elevation. The lot number should be stamped on each bundle.

8. When installing your new roof, be sure and wear soft-soled shoes. This will help avoid damage to the shingles.
